
NEW SECRET U.S. JET—President Johnson Saturday revealed at his news conference the existence of this new U.S. super-secret jet fighter plane, designed A-11. He said the plane far exceeds the performance of any other aircraft in use in the world today, capable of flying at more than 2,000 miles an hour at high altitudes. One key to the development of this plane which flies at three times the speed of sound, is a new process of fabrication with titanium metal. (AP Wirephoto)

LBJ Takes Wraps Off Super-Secret Aircraft

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson took the wraps off a five-year-old military secret Saturday, disclosing that the United States has developed a high-flying interceptor that can slice through the air at more than 2,000 miles an hour.

Johnson said this plane is capable of a performance that "far exceeds that of any other aircraft in the world today."

Development of the hitherto supersecret plane was announced at Johnson's first news conference to be carried live to the nation by radio and television.

The conference, with Johnson facing 305 reporters from the head of a U-shaped table in a State Department conference room, coincided with the end of his first 100 days in office—days which Johnson said have produced real accomplishments.

Clearly, the biggest surprise was word that the nation now has a needle-shaped plane called the A-11, perfected under a program that was, amazingly, kept secret since the effort was launched in 1959.

Other conference highlights:

—Johnson passed up a chance to deny a report that his Thursday trip to Florida was cloaked in stringent secrecy because of a tip that a Cuban suicide pilot might try to ram his plane. Without getting specific, he said he had been told there were "reasons for taking additional precautions." And he said he followed suggestions developed by the Secret Service and Director J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI.

—The President said he has neither discussed nor approved plans to carry South Viet Nam's guerrilla war into Communist North Viet Nam. "I think that too much speculation has already taken place," he said, adding the view that much of it was "without justification."

—William B. Bundy, now an assistant secretary of defense, will succeed the recently resigned Roger Hilsman as assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. Johnson said "This whole area (embracing Viet Nam) needs every bit of the best manpower that it can get."

—There has been no meeting of the minds" in resolving the dispute with Panama, Johnson said. But he said the United States realizes that the 1903 treaty governing the status of the Panama Canal Zone must be modified from time to time "and perhaps would require adjustment in 1964 or 1965. Johnson actually said 1963 or 1964, but the White House said later he misspoke. This could mean a major break in the U.S.-Panamanian standoff. But Johnson repeated that diplomatic relations must be restored before talks proceed.

—Johnson said the administration position is firm in support of the House-passed civil rights bill. He said he suspects that rumors he might be willing to compromise the key public accommodations section of the bill "are strictly Republican in origin."

—As for politics, Johnson said he hasn't speculated on who might be his Republican opponent in the November presidential election and he said he is "unaware of any political inclinations" that may be entertained by Henry Cabot Lodge, the U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam who has been mentioned as a possible GOP aspirant. Johnson said Lodge, the GOP vice-presidential nominee in 1960, has done nothing of a partisan nature "that has in any way interfered with his work" in Saigon.

Announcing development of the experimental A11 jet, Johnson said the craft "has been tested in sustained flight at more than 2,000 miles per hour and at altitudes in excess of 70,000 feet."

Gold Mining May Be Resumed In Cripple Creek, Report Says

Gold mining may be resumed in Cripple Creek this summer, according to a Saturday report by United Press International.

The wire service reported that a Canadian firm has taken an option on the El Paso Mine, which is owned by the Beacon Hill Company of Colorado Springs.

Selby Young, 2915 Marilyn Rd., president of Beacon Hill, declined to comment on the report that the mine has been leased by Great Divide Exploration Ltd., of Toronto.

Young said "I'm not authorized to speak about it."

According to the UPI story, the Toronto firm has leased the mine until June 1 with an option to buy.

The El Paso mine is one of the historic mines of the Cripple Creek - Victor goldfields which created region color and millionaires during the last years of the past century and early in this. It is located along Colorado Highway 67 between Cripple Creek and Victor.

The Beacon Hill company bought the mine in 1956 from Thomas Coupland of Colorado Springs and James Knight of Chicago for a reported $50,000.

Officers at that time of the then newly-formed Beacon Hill company were Young, president; Mark Wild, secretary-treasurer; Will Jurgens, vice president; and Reed Williams, Olathe, second vice president.

In 1960, the mine was opened for a new kind of gold harvest—the tourist.

The El Paso Gold Mine Tours Inc., company was formed that year and leased the mine from the owners to use it for guided tours during the tourist season.

No gold mining has been carried on in Cripple Creek since the last mine shut down in 1962. Operators say that the government-fixed prices of gold, at $35 an ounce, is too low to allow profitable operations.

Efforts during the past years by business and mining leaders in this area to have congress increase the price, to about $70 an ounce, have usually netted considerable publicity in this area, but have not moved the congress.

British Airliner Disappears With 83 Persons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—A British airliner carrying 83 persons, barred by fog from landing at this Winter Olympics city, vanished in the Alps Saturday. The Austrian Press Agency said it is believed to have crashed within a 30-mile radius of Mt. Patscherkofel.

Mt. Patscherkofel, site of a downhill ski race in the recent Olympic Games, is a 7,373-foot peak five miles southeast of Innsbruck.

Austrian and West German rescue teams launched a search that fanned out across narrow western Austria and the nearby frontier areas. Fog, rain and snow cut visibility.

The plane was a four-engine turboprop Britannia of the Eagle Airlines bearing a crew of eight and 75 passengers from London. The passengers were described as mostly tourists. An airline spokesman said many

Down-the-Wire Race Forecast in New Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)—The nation's first presidential primary, which bore advance earmarks of a walk-away for Sen. Barry Goldwater, has developed into a tight, down to the wire race between Goldwater and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

This is a consensus opinion of prominent New Hampshire Republicans in these last day before primary day on March 10.

It comes at a time when Goldwater and Rockefeller are launching their final drives for votes.

"Rockefeller started off with a marvelous tactical advantage," one GOP leader said. "As the underdog, he had nowhere to go but up. Now his

Jury for Ruby Still Short of Two Members

By ARTHUR EVERETT

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby's murder trial was recessed Saturday until Monday with the jury still short two members.

For Ruby, 52, grown increasingly pale and gaunt of face since his arrest, it meant another lost weekend in a Dallas County Jail cell. He has been held without bail since Nov. 24 when he shot to death Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

Eight men and two women have been sworn in as jurors since the trial began Feb. 17 before Judge Joe B. Brown. By noon Saturday, when the recess was called, 133 prospective jurors had been questioned. Most were disqualified for fixed opinions on the case or because they opposed capital punishment.

Ruby, operator of a Dallas strip-tease joint, is accused of malicious murder, which carries a maximum penalty of death in the electric chair.

In presenting the state's case, Dist. Atty. Henry M. Wade is merely required to prove that Ruby, when he stepped from a crowd in the basement of the Dallas police headquarters and gunned down Oswald, did so

AFA Aspirants Should Make Plans to Apply

High school juniors interested in entering the United States Air Force Academy upon graduation were urged today by Maj. Charles G. Goodner Jr., Boulder, to begin making their plans to apply.

Maj. Goodner, an Air Force reserve officer not on active duty, serves as Academy liaison officer to assist interested candidates needing additional information on entrance requirements.

Most of the Academy's authorized nomintaions are allotted to U. S. senators and representatives. Due to the large number of applications received by them each year, it takes considerable time for the members of congress to screen requests and select nominees for qualifying entrance examinations, the major explained.

Maj. Goodner of 365 S. 39th St., Boulder, can provide complete information for high school guidance counselors, male students and their parents on the Air Force Academy.

Carson Men Will Donate to Health Fund

Ft. Carson and 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) soldiers are again demonstrating their concern for world problems not directly concerned with the military, as the Federal Service Joint Crusade and National Health Agencies fund begins Saturday at the mountain post.

According to Col. Don R. Hickman, 3d Brigade commander, and fund-raising chairman for the drive, half a dollar can be a real contribution to solving many of the nation's ills and the world's problems.

Military pay on Saturday and March 31 includes two half dollars. Each soldier on post will receive two small envelopes with slots for 50-cent pieces. One envelope will be for the Joint Crusade, the other for the National Health Agencies. The amount contributed is up to each donor, with the envelopes being forwarded to Denver for tally.

The goal at Ft. Carson is 100 per cent participation. This annual drive is one of three authorized by Department of Defense.

Joint Crusade contributions go to humanitarian relief and rehabilitation of oppressed peoples thruout the world, according to Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, post and division commander, in endorsing the twin fund campaign.

National Health Agencies contributions finance research to develop preventive measures and cures for the most dreaded diseases which plague Americans.

I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY

C. S. DUDLEY

I suppose anyone, looking back over the years, thinks of narrow escapes he has had.

I had one in Cripple Creek. I did a two weeks' shift on the Cripple Creek newspaper in 1910. Knowing I would be there but a short time, I resolved to make use of my contacts to see some of the mines.

One day the superintendent was showing me thru one of the deeper mines. We had come up from a low level and the lift stopped at one of the higher levels, which we were viewing. I carried a miner's candlestick, as did the superintendent, and the light we had was pretty dim to be walking about in. As we went back to the shaft the superintendent lifted a two-by-four, hinged at one end, that served as a gate. I must have been under the impression that the lift was there and that he was waiting for me to precede him, for I stepped in.

The lift was approaching swiftly from below and a corrigated iron top of it hit me and knocked me back into the drift, where the superintendent was standing. He broke my fall to the floor of the drift, and was amazed that I had not been hurt beyond a bruise on one hand. He said it could not have happened again without probably killing me, and suggested that as long as I was not hurt it would be as well to say nothing about it, as otherwise he would have to make out reports. All the way to the surface, and until I left the mine, he talked of nothing but his amazement that I had not been hurt. I was not even scared, until I got to thinking about it afterward.

Then there was the time that I went for an airplane ride over Colorado Springs with Bill Mulligan, then sports editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette and Telegraph, and a pilot who had been giving him flying lessons. My knees knocked while I was in the air and I fancied I heard a wing creaking. I asked Mulligan if he had heard the noise. He said that he had not. A short time afterwards a wing came off of a plane out there and the pilot was killed. I don't know whether it was the plane I had flown in, but I fancied it was, and I have often thought of it not without a shiver.

There was the time that I went for a ride with 10 other men, mostly newspaper reporters, in the Knabenshue dirigible over Los Angeles. We flew low over high buildings and imagined what it would be like if we struck one of the projecting cornices and were left hanging there with the cloth slowly ripping. Nothing like that happened, but on the way back to a hangar in Pasadena the engine killed and we were as in the basket of a free balloon. For hours we were in the air. Knabenshue would let out gas to get low enough so that a drag rope might be seized by persons following us on the ground. Then he would have us throw out sand to avoid hitting anything. Finally when Knabenshue told us that if those below could not catch the rope in the next few minutes to throw out everything loose, as we would have to clear the high Arroyo Seco bridge and then the mountains, beyond which we faced danger of landing on the desert without water or food. The drag rope was caught and wound around an orange tree and we were rescued. I think my knees knocked all the while we were drifting about.

Then there was a time in Pasadena that as I walked across the railroad track in the residential part of the city, with my mind I don't know were, I heard the screech of a locomotive whistle and as I jumped from the track was fanned by something on the train.

I also remember, with shivers, a time I was sent out to a house on a dark street in Los Angeles to ask the man who lived there something about some news story.

I went by street car and when I reached the house I thought was the right address I opened the front gate and struck a match to read the number. I did not see the number. What I did see was an enormous dog standing silently on the porch with its teeth bared. I backed out, shivering like a leaf, and then ran. When I got back to the office I told the city editor there was no one at home at the address to which he had sent me.

On still another occasion when I had the police run in Los Angeles I accompanied an undertaker, who was also a deputy coroner, in the open seat of an old-fashioned "dead wagon" to a house outside of the city where a child had died under circumstances that were being investigated. The undertaker-deputy coroner satisfied himself that death had been due to natural causes. The father of the child was not at home. The undertaker put the body of the child in a basket and into the low covered black wagon and whipped up the horses as we started back to the city in the rain.

We had not gone far when we heard shouts behind us. The father, riding a horse and brandishing a shotgun, accused us of being "body snatchers." The undertaker turned the horses around and took the child's body back to the house.

Then we returned to the city still in the rain. I was soaked to the skin and was really frightened on that occasion. The man, father of the child, beside himself with grief and anger, might have shot at us.

I have had some other narrow escapes also in newspaper work, but this column grows long and it is frightening even to recall them.

Post Editor To Lecture at Monday Meeting

The Town Hall morning series sponsored by the Junior League of Colorado Springs will present Stewart Alsop, Saturday Evening Post Contributing Editor on National Affairs, as guest speaker Monday. This lecture will be held at 10:30 a.m. at the Fine Arts Center Theatre, with a complimentary coffee being served at 9:45 a.m. in the lounge. Alsop will be introduced by Mrs. John E. McWilliams. His talk is titled "What's Beyond Today's Headlines."

Based in Washington, Asop travels extensively in the United States and abroad gathering information and background for his penetrating articles. He spends two months or more abroad each year because, he says, "it is impossible to write sensibly about foreign affairs unless you go out and see for yourself."

The success of his policy is evidenced by his brilliant series of foreign reports in the Post. Usually well versed in defense matters, Alsop has produced some remarkably pescient reporting in this field. For example, he reported the first Soviet intercontinental missile test weeks before the Pentagon issued official confirmation. He also travels widely in this country reporting on domestic politics.

Alsop has received much recognition. With his brother, Joseph, he was selected for the Overseas Press Club award for "Best Interpretation of Foreign News" both in 1949 and 1951 and for "Best Consistent Reporting from Abroad" in 1953. For their magazine articles, the Alsops jointly were given the Lauterback Award for "a substantial contribution in the field of civil liberties" and the Benjamin Franklin Award for "the most distinguished magazine writing."

Alsop is a great-nephew of Theodore Roosevelt, and comes from a well-known Connecticut family. Rejected for all the services on medical grounds, he joined a famous British regiment, the King's Royal Rifle Corps, and commanded a machine gun platoon in Italy. In 1944, he transferred to the American Army and parachuted behind the lines in France for the Office of Strategic Services, being awarded the Croix de Guerre with Palm for his services with the French resistance.

Congressman Wants to Ban Friday TV Tilts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. T. A. Thompson, D-La., said Friday he plans to offer a bill to prohibit the telecasting of professional football games on Friday nights in areas where high school games are played.

"If these professionally inspired programs are made available to the public, they will take away much of the support and enthusiasm by local citizens, so essential for successful competition between high school athletic teams," he said.

American Broadcasting Co. and National Football League teams reportedly plan to televise five Friday night games next season.

A total of 11,981 bills were introduced in the first session of the 88th Congress.

ON CANES AND CRUTCHES — Arthritic and rheumatic diseases will be the topic of the Senior Seminar Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 4:15 p.m., in the Little Theater of the City Auditorium. Feiler ,orthopedic surgeon; Dr. Lloyd R. Lundsten, internist; Dr. Kenneth Lovell, general practitioner. The session is open to the public and is free of charge. It is sponsored by the Senior Coordinating Council and will be followed on the next two Wednesday afternoons by sessions entitled: "Are You a Community Resource" and "Your Eyes and Ears: Safeguards."

Support Command Has New Executive Head

Lt. Col. Matthew W. Reiss, who just completed the most recent course of study at Armed Forces Staff College, is the new executive officer of Support Command.

He believes that there is much to be learned and much to be refined, but from any point of view the Support Command as an integral part of an Army division has lived up to the highest hopes of its planners.

Col. Reiss said he welcomes the opportunity for experience at the operational level of the Army's newest concept of supply. "Without question, it is one of the best things that ever happened to provide more efficient means of support to combat forces."

Col. Reiss, who won the Bronze Star in Korea and Army Commendation Medals in Berlin and at Fourth Army Headquarters, gained his experience at all levels. He is a graduate of Command and General Staff College, as well as Armed Forces Staff College.

Col. Reiss and his wife, the former Sonja Lunoe, live at Qtrs. 6249B with their three children.

The 100 per cent units are: 705th Maintenance, 77th Armor, 5th Aviation, 19th Artillery, 2nd Btn. 11th Infantry, 5th Medical, 5th S & T, 611th Ordnance, 529th Signal, 267th Signal, 19th MP's, DivArty Hq. Battery and the 5th MP's.

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

(1) — Social security numbers are required to be entered in space provided on page 1 of your Federal income tax return. Both husband and wife must enter their social security number when both have income.

(2) — Be sure to attach copy B of all W-2 forms to your 1963 Federal income tax return. Refunds cannot be paid more can credit be given for taxes withheld without the required Forms W-2, the withholding tax statements from employers If the taxpayer had several jobs during the year, a W-2 Form for each job should be included

(3) — Taxpayers who have moved after filing their return should make sure the postmaster gets their forwarding address. This is particularly important if you have a refund coming, whether check or savings bond.

(4) — Many tax returns are being received unsigned. While we assume that failure to sign is just an oversight, we cannot process such returns and must set them aside for special handling.

Double-check your return for signatures before mailing. One signature is required for a single person; two for a married couple filing jointly.

(5) — Having a problem getting your W-2. First, try to get a Form W-2 from the employer. If you do not succeed, notify IRS. Finally, you should prepare your income tax return from the best information available and file it before the deadline. You should also attach a note explaining why the Form W-2 is not attached to the return.

If a taxpayer terminates his employment at any job during the year, the law requires that the employer furnish a Form W-2 at the time of the last payment of wages.

Thus, if a person leaves a job permanently for any reason and does not receive a Form W-2 when he receives his last payment of wages, he should request the employer to furnish one.

Carson Soldier, Family Escape East Germany

In the early morning hours of Sept. 11, 1951, with the Russians in pursuit, Pfc. Axel O. Schwanke, of Ft. Carson's 557th Transportation Company, his parents and three sisters made good their escape from East Germany.

Schwanke's father, who had been a prisoner of Russia during the Second World War, had refused to cooperate with the Russians and managed to escape with his family on the eve of imprisonment.

Leaving behind all their possessions including the family farm, the Schwanke family boarded a train for West Berlin. The Russian guards were lax during the early morning hours and the Schwankes were able to pass thru to West Berlin without incident.

With the help of the Red Cross, the Schwanke family was processed and cleared for residence in West Germany in about eight weeks and settled in Mannheim in January, 1952.

In June, 1954, thru the help of an aunt in Woodstock, Illinois, the family sailed for the United States. They resided in McHenry, Ill., where father and son worked on farms in the area.

Schwanke was selected as Soldier-of-the-Month for his unit in November, 1963. He is presently assigned as driver for Captain David Burke, 557th's commanding officer, while working on his high school diploma and his citizenship papers.

On completion of his tour he plans to return to his job with Liberty Asphalt, Grays Lake, Ill., as road construction equipment operator.

Jury for Ruby Still Short of Two Members

with premeditation -- that he planned what he did and came prepared to do it.

Wade said that, although Texas law does not require the state to prove a motive, he will attempt to do so. Presumably, he will try to show that Ruby hoped by killing Oswald to gain "fame and fortune."

Once a full panel of 12 jurors is chosen, Ruby will enter a formal plea to the murder charge, and the defense has said it will be innocent by reason of temporary insanity.

In questioning prospective jurors over the past two weeks, the defense staff, headed by Melvin Belli, a colorful California trial lawyer, has clearly outlined in general terms the case it is prepared to present.

From this damage, the defense contends, Ruby developed psychomotor epilepsy, characterized by blackouts brought on by shock and emotional stress.

The shock of President Kennedy's assassination in Ruby's adopted city of Dallas, the defense holds, triggered one of these blackouts, and he was in effect, unconscious when he shot Oswald.

LBJ Takes Wraps Off Super Secret, Top-Speed Plane

Johnson said several A11 aircraft are now being flight-tested at Edwards Air Force Base in California. The plane was built by Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., and is powered by J58 jet engines designed by the Pratt & Whitney Division of United Aircraft Corp.

Development of the fleet plane was made possible in part Johnson said, by the mastery of techniques for using titanium which can resist the high temperatures created by travel at more than three times the speed of sound.

Johnson said work on the A11 entailed "major advances in aircraft technology of great significance to both military and commercial application" — especially in efforts to develop a supersonic airliner.

Johnson disclosed he will make public Monday a report by Eugene Black, former head of the World Bank, on plans for financing the supersonic airliner program.

An early question put to the President sought his appraisal of the possible political impact of the Senate's investigation of Bobby Baker, the President's erstwhile protege who quit last October as secretary to the Senate Democratic majority.

Restating a position he has taken in the past, Johnson said this is a matter for the Senate to handle and "we will have to see what the consequences are, following their recommendations after all of the evidence is in."

campaign is peaking at a time when it counts the most."

Whether the Rockefeller "peak" will carry him to victory 10 days hence is something that few politicians are ready to predict.

Most still give Goldwater an edge, but only a margin for three principal factors:

1. His strong early lead, which his supporters estimated in January to be about 4 to 1 over Rockefeller.

2. His support from top-ranked GOP leaders, including New Hampshire Sen. Norris Cotton, the Goldwater campaign chairman.

3. The support he is expected to retain among conservative voters in rural towns. The town vote generally calls the turn in New Hampshire presidential primaries. This is because primary day coincides with town meeting day, when country folk turn out in large numbers to approve town budgets, settle hot local races, and incidentally to vote in the primary.

Despite these factors, many politicians believe Goldwater has lost support as he has voiced his conservative views and as they have come under attack from Rockefeller.

The big question now is whether Rockefeller has picked up Goldwater's alleged lost strength, or whether it has gone to other candidates in the primary.

"Goldwater has made a lot of foolish statements about Social Security, Cuba and the United Nations," says former Gov. Robert O. Blood, who is running as an uncommitted GOP convention delegate. "I think he has lost support, but I'd still be surprised if Rockefeller overtakes him."

Rockefeller and Goldwater, both of whom have campaigned vigorously in New Hampshire, are being challenged on the presidential preference side of the ballot by Maine Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, and Norman Lepage, a local perennial.

Glenn Postpones Retirement After Bathroom Fall

The astronaut's announcement was made at Grant Hospital in Columbus, following consultation with his doctors and advisers in his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Glenn's retirement to enter politics was to take effect at midnight. However, a mild concussion suffered in a bathroom fall Wednesday has kept him hospitalized with an equilibrium disturbance. He gets dizzy when he moves.

The choice of whether to retire from the Marines immediately or to remain on active duty pending final determination of his condition, was offered Glenn earlier in a telegram from Marine headquarters in Washington.

Glenn said his decision to remain on active duty came when doctors could not assure him that his disability would not be resolved for two or three weeks.

However, the doctors' failure to assure Glenn of a quick recovery was not to be taken as evidence of serious complications, the astronaut said.

Natural Pollen Search So Far Unsuccessful

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A total of almost 1,000 materials and combinations of materials designed to replace natural pollen from flowers in a bee's diet have been tested without success in the past five years at the U.S. Southwest Bee Culture Laboratory.

Unlike honey, sufficient pollen to keep a whole bee colony through the winter cannot be stored and many insects are lost because of a lack of protein and other ingredients pollen supplies in a bee's natural diet.

The Nation's Weather

Weather Bureau charts had a March-like appearance as February drew to a close.

The proverbial March winds covered much of the area from the Southwestern United States thru the Great Lakes Region. Southwesterly winds, occasionally gusting to near 50 miles per hour, caused flowing dust in sections of the plains and Mississippi Valley.

Along with the winds were temperatures representative of March, with afternoon highs in the 40s and 50s being common over most of the country.

Temperatures in the 30s were confined to the north Atlantic States. Temperatures in the 60s were limited to extreme southern sections of the country.

Precipitation during Friday afternoon was scarce. The only area of significant rainfall was over the coastal areas of Washington and the Pacific Northwest.

Police Hold Ex-Con in Station Stickup

Police reported Friday that Robert L. Belknap, 34, of Denver, has admitted holding up Ray's Westside Enco Gas Station, 1902 W. Colorado Ave., and escaping with $97.60.

Belknap, an ex-convict, is alleged to have made the confession over the telephone from Denver Police Headquarters to Capt. Carl E. Petry, commander of the detective division of the Colorado Springs Police Division.

Patrolman John L. Collins, radio dispatcher at Colorado Springs Police Department heard of a holdup at Littleton Jan. 31 and noted that the description of the suspect matched that given of the man who robbed the local gas station.

Collins notified Littleton and asked if any arrest was made to keep his office informed. Belknap was picked up and Donald L. Holmes, the attendant at the local gas station, was driven to Denver and allegedly picked out Belknap from a lineup. Earlier he had identified him from a photograph.

At first Belknap denied all knowledge of the Colorado Springs robbery saying he had been in Kansas City at the time but on Friday afternoon he admitted the offense Capt. Petry said.

KILLED IN COLLISION—A headon collision against the abutment of the underpass in the 700 block of East Platte Avenue Saturday night resulted in the death of Sgt. Leroy Fosnaugh, 29, Ft. Carson. The sergeant was rushed to St. Francis Hospital but was pronounced dead upon arrival from multiple head injuries a hospital spokesman said.

NORAD Scientist Speaks Of Future Science Advance

Dr. John K. Sterrett, scientific advisor for the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), predicted Saturday that before many more years have gone by, a world-wide computer system will enable science to accurately predict the weather for an entire season.

Speaking to members of the Pikes Peak Cattlemen's Association in their annual meeting at the Colorado Springs Country Club, Dr. Sterrett also predicted that within 30 years science will be "somewhere out in space." He said his personal belief is that man will find life on some of the other planets.

He said that his predictions may seem far-fetched to some, but pointed out that "I, today, am doing things that I read about as a boy in the amazing stories of science fiction."

The scientist described the vast computer system which is already in the process of being set up. He said that computers eventually will enable man to predict not only the weather, but elections, business ventures and stock market developments.

Sterrett explained that computer centers will be located in other parts of the world and that they will be linked together by communications satellites orbiting the earth.

"If I want to find out about something that is stored in a computer in Russia," he explained, "I transmit my question to the satellite hovering over my particular section of the country. That satellite relays my question to the satellite over Russia, which sends it to the computer in the Soviet Union. The reply comes back by the same route, translated so I can understand it."

The scientist said the computer is going to change states, nations and empires. Many of these changes are already in the process, he declared.

He cited a computer being used by the secret service of the United States which is being used to track down would-be presidential assassins. Another computer is being built in Washington, D.C., Sterrett revealed, which will keep track of all patents ever filed in this country and which can, in a few moments, inform an applicant for a patent whether or not his invention has already been patented, and by whom.

He said that computers are already being used to keep track of schedules of trains and commercial airliners, and predicted that computerized controls for automobiles is possible in the not-too-distant future.

The NORAD scientist said that the U.S. will orbit a new Nimbus satellite in May or June of this year which will follow a polar orbit and which will take photographs of the earth's surface and of the cloud cover constantly during each of its 90-minute orbits. He said that a series of such satellites, each with its own particular orbit, could map the entire surface of the earth every 24 hours, making it possible for science to give accurate weather predictions.

Sterrett expressed the opinion that control of the weather is a definite possibility in the near future. The Navy, he said, already has on the books a weather control technique which could make conditions "pretty rough" for an enemy.

"We can already partially control local weather," the scientist said, "by seeding the clouds with organic chemicals." He said the use of dry ice is not practical and that the results, if any, are unpredictable.

He said that one method of controlling the weather is to bring about a rapid change of the temperature of the air above the earth. Pointing out that dark materials absorb heat, he said plans are already "on the books" to darken large areas of the earth's surface — thousands of square miles — which is expected to cause a rapid 5-degree change in the temperature of the air above the earth, and that such a change will cause storms of various intensities. He explained that it would be up to science to determine what type of storms would be needed.

In order to control the climate, Sterrett said, science must have information. "You can change the north pole to somewhere else as far as cold is concerned," he said, "as long as you have the correct information."

He said the Russians are already studying plans which, if carried out, could turn Siberia into a Garden of Eden and turn the U.S. into another Siberia.

Sterrett predicted that in 30 years, man will be "somewhere out in space." He said that many persons had wondered why science felt that it must go into space.

"The reason why we are going to do this," Sterrett explained, "is because we are scientists and because we have to know" the why, the what and the where of all things.

He stated that science has the power to go out into space now, but that it isn't ready to solve all the problems that would arise. He predicted that small bases would be established on some of the planets and "keeping them supplied with food, oxygen, and other necessities is going to cost more and more money. I look for the colonization of some planet in 30 years," he stated.

Sterrett also predicted that in 10 to 20 years from now, man will have hospitals orbiting the earth. He said that in 20 years from now, buses will be traveling from one of the moons of the planet Mars to the planet itself.

He said that it is necessary for man to go out into space and to colonize it, for "someday, our great-great grandchildren are going to run out of sun; they're going to run out of oil" and other minerals which are now being taken out of the earth.

"It may even be that man will annihilate himself on earth, and if he does he may need a place to propagate himself," Dr. Sterrett concluded.

Cattleman Blasts Reports Of Change in Tax Picture

ions were furnished by the Mannequin Dress Shop of Colorado Springs.

Following the business sessions Saturday afternoon, a dutch treat cocktail hour was held at 6 p.m., with the annual banquet and dancing beginning at 7 p.m.

Other reports given at the meeting included one on brucellosis by Stanley Stolte of the El Paso County extension office; the president's annual report, by Tarpenning, and the treasurer's annual report by Burghart. Bob Smith, a director of the American National Cattlemen's Association, gave a report on that organization's recent convention.

In his statements to the cattlemen, Probst said that the changes which the Colorado General Assembly is trying to make in the state's income tax laws are those requested by the people when they approved Amendment No. 3 at the last election.

"Bringing this about is bound to cause a shift in the tax liability," Probst said. He stated that the General Assembly is not sure whether the voters wanted a state income tax form which would conform exactly to the federal, or if they wanted a simplified report which would not change the tax liability.

"We've had a lot of racket in the newspapers as to how these changes will alter the state tax picture," Probst charged. He said the "blend of effects" will affect each taxpayer differently, and that the only way to determine what these effects will be is thru experience.

Probst again cited what he termed newspaper speculation where the state's financial condition is concerned.

"The state is not in the red," he declared. "The Colorado Constitution forbids deficit spending." He said that the current situation resulted from estimates of a year ago which indicated that the revenue would amount to more than it actually did.

He pointed out that this situation, combined with the drouth and the general downturn of business in Colorado reduced the amount of revenue expected. He indicated that the Democrats couldn't have done any better.

Probst said that Gov. Love had saved the state $3 million by reducing expenditures, and by taking other steps to reduce the cost of operating the government. These steps include, according to Probst, the recall of credit cards, the demand that state-owned cars not be used for personal transportation, and the substitution, when possible, of letters for telephone calls.

The governor's assistant criticized the failure of news media, as he put it, to tell the whole story about the three-cent cigarette tax. This tax, he said, will allow the state to reduce the property tax and save the taxpayers over $5 million a year.

Concerning the recent furor over Gov. Love's proposal to increase tuition at state-supported colleges and universities, Probst stated that most of the students who picketed against the increase came from out of state.

"I think it is reasonable," Probst said, "to look to the man who benefits from a college education for a big part of the revenue" required to give him that education. He said that Gov. Love's plan asks that the student pay only about 25 per cent of his education cost.

Probst said that $1,300,000 is being spent in Colorado each year to help students finally unable to pay for a college education. Between 40 and 50 per cent of this amount, he indicated, goes to students from out of state. This means, he opined, that every out-of-state student is being subsidized by Colorado taxpayers.

"Our first responsibility," he stated, "is to Colorado students. We can't take care of out-of-state students and still take care of Colorado's."

British Airliner Disappears With 83 Persons

were winter sports enthusiasts.

The U.S. Air Force said two Air Force Rescuemaster planes carrying parachutists and rescue teams had been sent from Prestwick Airport in Scotland to join the search.

The silver gray plane was due to land at Innsbruck Airport, in a valley cupped by mountains, at 3 p.m. — 9 a.m. EST. But low clouds and fog intervened. The pilot evidently circled a while at 10,000 feet — safely above the mountain tops.

There were differences of opinion as to just when radio contact was lost. The Civil Aviation Ministry said the plane's last report was at 3:13 p.m. The Austrian Press Agency said the plane radioed from the Patscherkofel area at 3:18 p.m., and that it is believed to have crashed between that time and 3:23 p.m.

"The plane had two radios aboard," the agency said. "It cannot be assumed that both went out of operation."

Its estimate of the flight radius was based on the distance the plane, which cruised at about 330 miles an hour, could cover in the few minutes of silence.

All reports said the plane's fuel reserves would have been exhausted by nightfall.

Officials said it must have crashed against one of the towering mountain tops of the Alps.

Two Injuries Reported To Police Department

Two injuries were reported to the police department Friday.

The first happened to Brenda Eileen Lingo, 17, of Route 4, Black Forest, who tripped and fell in front of 321 E. Colorado Ave. She was taken to Penrose Hospital suffering from a pain in her back.

The second incident happened at St. Mary's Gymnasium where Tony Iscovette, age unlisted, of Denver, was playing basketball. He told officers he ran into a wall.

Officials at Penrose Hospital said he had a double fracture of the right ankle.

Sheriff Checks Out Another Poisoning Case

A further case of dog poisoning was reported to the sheriff's office Friday. There have been several such incidents within the past two weeks.

Mrs. William Rudeisill, 225 Sherri Dr., Security, told Deputy Sheriff Wayne King that she let her dog out Friday morning and it returned about three quarters of an hour later.

She fed the animal and a short time later it went into violent convulsions. Mrs. Rudeisill took it to the doctor and as she lifted it out of the car it started shaking, fell to the ground and then ran off.

The doctor chased the animal but could not catch it. He said he believed the dog had received a lethal quantity of strychnine.

Students by the thousands marched through downtown streets to the British and American embassies. A few black-robed Orthodox priests joined the students.

Fighting flared between demonstrators and police in front of the U.S. Embassy building. Students estimated to number 4,000 shook fists and shouted: "America keep your hands off Cyprus," "American murderers," "Yankees back to Texas" and "Bravo Russia."

Clashes broke out when a group of students tried to rush the cordon of Greek police and break through to the embassy grounds. There was no report of serious injuries.

There were similar, though more peaceful, demonstrations during the day in Famagusta, Cyprus.

Papandreou was reported specifically irked at the United States because it supported a resolution in the U.N. Security Council Friday allowing Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash to give his views on the conflict between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet Monday to consider a resolution by Bolivia, Brazil, Morocco, Norway and the Ivory Coast—all nonpermanent members of the council—for an international force to keep peace on Cyprus.

Damages Not Collectable for Dog's Agony

DENVER (UPI) — A judge has ruled here that a dog owner cannot collect damages for "agony" resulting from the sight of the animal suffering.

In addition, said Dist. Judge Saul Pinchick, no damages are allowable to the dog itself for pain and suffering.

Mrs. Della Nicholson sued Dr. Jack G. Harvey, a veterinarian, alleging that her dog's jaw was broken as the result of administering oral medication.

She asked $5,000 damages for the dog's previous value, $1,000 damages for her own "distress in body and mind" from seeing the pet suffer, and $400 for vet and drug bills.

The judge ruled that since dogs can't file their own suits, damages to the dog for its pain and suffering were not allowable. He said Mrs. Nicholson could not collect damages for her own agony since she suffered no actual physical injury.

U.S., Japanese Air Officers Affirm Unity

Five future officers of the Japanese Air Force reaffirmed the spirit of cooperation which exists between the armed forces of their country and the U.S. during their visit to the Air Force Academy.

The five presented Academy Superintendent Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren with three gifts, each symbolizing the friendship existing between Japan and America.

Representing the visitors, T. Okabe gave Gen. Warren a silk flag, a book on the beautiful Japanese city of Kyoto, and a framed, calligraphic letter from Gen. Takeshi Matsuda, chief of staff of the Japanese Air Force.

The letter, in traditional Japanese brush writing expressed Gen. Matsuda's appreciation to Gen. Warren for courtesies extended during his visit to the Academy last October and emphasized the importance of cadet exchange visits as a means of enhancing friendly relationships between the two nations and leading to mutual understanding.

The Kyoto book will be presented to the Academy Library and the Japanese flag to the Cadet Wing at later ceremonies.

CONNECTICUT CHAMPIONS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Yale's football team stretched its winning streak over Connecticut colleges to 85 in a row when it conquered the University of Connecticut 3-0 last fall.

CHEVELLE! by CHEVROLET—a great highway performer

Malibu 4-Door Sedan

Malibu Super Sport Coupe

Malibu Super Sport Convertible

Chevelle 300 6-Passenger Station Wagon

Chevelle balanced performance is best!

Passing, cornering, threading through traffic, sudden stops—Chevelle excels all around! Chevrolet's new surprise package has what it takes to meet any driving challenge: Six or V8 engines, hefty brakes, Full Coil suspension—and a trim size that makes the most of them!

We didn't just cook up a batch of engines for Chevelle and call it performance. You can get performance aplenty—standard 120-hp Six or 195-hp V8 for starters—and optional at extra cost there's a 155-hp Six, a 220-hp V8, even a new 327-cu.-in. V8! But Chevelle's performance means more.

Size, for instance. Chevelle's a foot shorter than the big cars. That much less weight to carry around. Maximum performance-per-pound, and every pound counts.

The space Chevelle saves in size comes off the ends, not the middle. It rides like you want a car to ride—comfortably—on a 115-inch wheelbase.

To give you the most out of this engine performance and riding comfort, Chevelle lets you choose Powerglide*, 4-speed manual* or 3-speed manual transmission.

And knowing it would strike the right note with a lot of different people, we gave Chevelle 11 models—in three series. Knowing how people like the custom touch, we wrote out a long list of extra-cost options: everything from power seats to air conditioning, power windows to Positraction.

Knowing all this, what's keeping you from a test drive? Certainly not your Chevrolet dealer!

*Optional at extra cost

Division Support Command Is Termed Success

As new as road itself and just as successful, experts say, is Ft. Carson's and the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Support Command.

It was created with the Reorganization of Army Divisions (ROAD) to provide a central command of all division supply, transportation, maintenance, administration and medical services and to free combat units of this function.

The 5th Division Support Command, under the road concept, is tailored to support all components of the division. A forward support company of Fort Carson's 705th Maintenance Battalion is based at Fort Devens, Mass., working with the division's 2nd Brigade.

During the last two years, the support command has participated in four major exercises moving ammunition, food, fuel and other supplies from the rear support area to the brigade commands. In addition, it provided maintenance support of the fighting units, medical evacuation plus treatment and administrative support.

Among the units under the tactical control of the Support Commander, Col. Paul A. Loop, are the 5th Administration Company, 5th Medical Battalion, 5th Supply and Transport Battalion, 705th Maintenance Battalion, 5th Aviation Battalin and in Support Command Headquarters the 5th Division Band.

Attached to the command is the 10th Chemical Platoon, a Fifth Army unit, supplying the division with chemical equipment and supplies and maintaining such chemical equipment as protective masks.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D.,Ph.D.

Charles Lamb offers some advice that clergymen can expand beautifully in their sermons. It may seem paradoxical, but the more our clergymen can nurture consciences in Americans, the greater will be the demand for psychiatry and columns like this one. Concientious objectors were thus an indirect tribute to clergymen!

By George W. Crane,
Ph. D., M. D.

CASE R-495: Charles Lamb was a famous English writer.

"Don't introduce me to that man!" he once stated.

"For I want to go on hating him and I cannot hate a man whom I know."

That illustrates one of the best methods for preventing wars.

If we can promote more student exchanges, where the visitors actually live with the host family, then we can undermine much of the motivation for killing.

Yesterday I told you how Mrs. Crane couldn't even carry out her plan to transplant the chipmunks (which were robbing our bird feeders) to a forest a mile away.

After she caught her first chipmunk, she brought him inside our house and saw him, close up. Then she didn't have the heart to move him a mile away.

So she rationalized by saying our little grandchildren would probably enjoy watching chipmunks as much as the wild birds.

Familiarity tends to dissipate previous enmity as well as fear.

In time of war, however, the government deliberately hires psychologists to de-humanize the enemy.

Similarly, all the Germans were called vicious "Huns" and "Butchers."

It is difficult for a civilized human being to pull the trigger or toss a grenade at other human boys who have sweethearts or wives and children.

Conscientious Objectors were thus more numerous in World War II than ever before in American history, for the churches had done a good job of teaching world brotherhood of man.

Those C.O. boys were not any more cowardly than the rest of our military troops.

They just had been so brain washed with reference to brotherly love that they couldn't stomach the act of ripping out the entrails of a German or Japanese teen-ager with a bayonet or shooting him down with a machine gun.

Indirectly, therefore, the rise in the number of Conscientious Objectors was a tribute to the effectiveness of the churches.

During 18 years the Conscientious Objectors had been taught to love their fellowman.

Then, overnight, they were asked to shoot down their fellowman.

This caused a terrific emotional conflict, for you can't make such a complete turnabout in deep-seated emotions in a moment of time.

Those who didn't become Conscidentious Objectors, often became the psychiartric casualties.

They sprouted all sorts of psychosomatic ailments.

It may seem paradoxical but both Consecientious Objectors and thousands of psychiatric casualties among our troops were due to the preaching of clergymen in the peace time years prior to Pearl Harbor!

The better the preaching, the more of such cases.

For the spiritual idealism encouraged by churches helps produce those inner conflicts that result in nervous breakdowns.

Hamlet's "To be or not be" was similarly a result of conflict between conscience and revenge.

The greater the conscience of a nation, the more neurotic conflicts will result among its people. For tigers and lions don't need psychiartrists!

KENTUCKY RAISES PURSES

The state racing commission has raised the minimum purse to $1,100 and said it prefers an average of not less than $1,350 if parimutel handle permits. The old minimum was $1,000.

Blood Clot Dam Causes Usual Coronary Attack

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

Everyone talks about "coronaries" and heart attacks, since they are a major cause of death in modern America, but not everyone has a clear idea of what a heart attack is.

The term heart attacks mean that a portion of the heart muscle has died. This is due to a reduction of the blood flow in that portion of the heart muscle, either because of a blood clot (thrombosis) or a narrowing (atherosclerosis) in one of the coronary arteries, the vessels that supply the heart muscle with blood. The outcome depends on the extent and the location of the heart muscle involved.

The clots themselves are almost always the result of hardening of the arteries (atherosclerosis), a condition which is becoming more common among people (especially men) in their 30s, and is not rare in the 20s.

In atherosclerosis, the walls of arteries thicken and become less resilient. The diameter of the vessel narrows, and plaques of chemical are deposited on the walls much in the same way that plaques of rust can form on the inside of a water pipe.

These plaques tend to encourage the formation of blood clots, and the turbidity they set up in the fast-moving bloodstream causes the clots to snowball into larger and larger clots until they can block the vessel and "occlude" the flow of blood.

Coronary occlusions vary in severity depending upon whether the clot has formed at stoppage in a trunk artery or in one of the smaller branches. Younger people sometimes die of a single massive occlusion which blocks an important trunk artery. In older persons, an equally massive clot may not be fatal because collateral circulatory systems have developed with age, alternate branchings of the vessels which can carry enough blood to pick up the job of supplying the heart muscle.

The changes in the walls of the arteries which lead to occlusions can begin as early as 15 to 20 years, and sometimes even are present at birth, and they usually grow progressively worse. Great efforts are being made to determine the cause or causes of atherosclerosis. Altho there is evidence to support a number of different theories the final answer is not yet at hand. Heredity seems to play a major role.

High blood pressure and obesity seem to accelerate the progression of atherosclerosis. Diabeties is associated with an increased incidence of atherosclerosis.

In certain patients with extreme elevation of one of the fatty elements of the blood, cholesterol, there is a high incidence of coronary disease. What part cholesterol plays in the over all problem remains to be determined. Chronic emotional stress also seems to be important.

When the causes of atherosclerosis are clearly understood it seems likely that successful preventive measures will be developed. Until then, it is wise to discover and treat those circumstances which are known to be associated with an increased likelihood of heart attacks.

Despite much popular belief, heart attacks are not necessarily a disease of old age. Frequently they come at the peak of a person's best years, and they are becoming distressingly common in the 30s. Americans have a particularly high incidence of coronary occlusion.

The heart attack rate begins to go up sharply at age 40 and continues high until age 65. Then it tapers off. Heart attacks are infrequent in women before the menopause, but afterward the rate is about the same as for men.

Altho heavy exercise and sudden violent physical activity have bad reputations as being responsible for precipitating heart attacks, the record shows that only about 3 per cent of attacks occur during exercise.

Far more occur during sleep or resting, and the majority come at night. But it is undoubtedly true that undue exercise in a man who is not in good condition can lead to a heart attack, especially at high altitude.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. A person with a hitsory of heart attacks in his family cannot change his heredity, but he can be meticulous about observing the rules for maintaining good health and preventing heart attacks.

2. Those rules include: moderate, regular exercise, keeping the weight down, avoiding fatty foods, controlling high blood pressure, and regular physical examinations.

3. It would be a very good idea if your next routine physical checkup included an electrocardiogram, an electrical tracing which measures the performance of your heart. An electrocardiogram meaures only the present and the past; it does not forecast. But it is very important to your medical history, and two or three of them over a period of time tells your doctor much more about how your heart is operating than a single test after you have suffered what you think was an attack.

4. A good physical fitness program can do much to prevent heart attacks in most persons. Let your doctor advise you, and don't plunge into an all-out program after years of no exercise.

5. Smoking can produce angina (left chest pain) in some persons. The cause is a spasm of the blood vessels and a temporary shortage of oxygen in the muscle. Some people are more sensitive to this process than others. But smoking is definitely out for any person who has a limited cardiac reserve—that is, a limited capacity of the heart for work beyond the ordinary requirements of daily living.

6. The principle signs of a heart attack are: pain or a feeling of tightness in the chest, sometimes but not always on the left side and sometimes but not always radiating down the left arm; shortness of breath; nausea and vomiting; clamy perspiration; unconsciousness in some cases.

7. Any one of these signs should be investigated thoroly in collaboration with your family doctor. Don't take chances. Consult your physician if a pain is experienced anywhere in the trunk.

Hot Line With Tokyo Denied by Author

TOKYO (AP)—Tokyo newspapers said today Norman Cousins told Japanese Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda that Washington plans a "hot line" with Tokyo, but the American author strongly denied it.

"I don't know anything about a hot line," said Cousins, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Nobel peace prize.

Book Describes Natural Gas Industry Dynamic for Nation

Note: Bob Murray has kindly furnished us now and then with book reviews for our Saturday Leisuretime section, in which his discussions of technical subject matter are marked by conciseness and clarity. Because of the importance of the following theme locally, we present it in this space today. — John Fetler, Book Editor.

THE DYNAMIC NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY — By Alfred Leeston, John A. Crichton and John C. Jacobs. University of Oklahoma Press. $9.95. — Reviewed by R. B. Murray.

Living in Colorado Springs, which is the headquarters for two natural gas transmission companies, we are aware of the importance of the natural gas industry. Yet even most of us think of the use of natural gas as a relatively recent development. Actually it is not. The ancient Chinese were the first to use natural gas as a fuel. They transported it from wells of 2,000 feet in depth to the places of consumption with bamboo pipes. The use of gas was known in Japan as early as 615 B. C. In ancient Russia in the Baku region as early as 967 A. D. flaming gas wells inspired a religious cult which worshipped fire.

Here in the United States, General Lafayette passed thru Fredonia, New York on June 4, 1825. Observing the brilliant light of the first natural gas system in our country which had been installed with wooden pipes four years earlier, he announced that he had "better get away from a place where gas came from a mysterious underground source as it was evidently too near Hades."

The use of natural gas in Fredonia, New York had attracted such attention and was regarded so unique that the German explorer Alexander von Humboldt declared its existence the eighth wonder of the world.

Certainly not unique, today natural gas still commands von Humboldt's classification. In The Dynamic Natural Gas Industry, the authors expertly describe why. They tell about the industry in its three phases: production, transmission and distribution. They describe the supply of gas from a geologic point of view, how to compute reserves, the problems of transmission and the engineering and legal problems of distribution.

One of the more interesting parts of the book is devoted to the discovery that methane, the main constituent of natural gas, is the ultimate simplest hydrocarbon raw material, much simpler than coal. It therefore provides an important basis for our nation's growing economy based upon synthetics — the petrochemical industry.

Other interesting portions of the book are devoted to ocean shipping of natural gas and the new importance of its artificial underground storage.

Not a book to be read at one sitting, this volume is nevertheless fine reading for those who want to spend their leisuretime in the discovery of the intricacies of a vast and fascinating industry. — R. B. Murray.

Control Termed Answer to Safe Winter Driving

Who is responsible for auto accidents on winter highways?

This question was answered today by Attorney General Duke W. Dunbar of the Colorado Highway Safety Council.

"The operator of any vehicle holds in his grasp the power to control his machine, and therefore he must accept responsibility for its safe operation," the state safety spokesman declared.

"It's not the icy or snow covered road so much as cold indifference on the part of the driver toward safe driving rules that leads to a skid," he said. "The man who barrels along at summer speeds on wintry roads is asking for trouble". Dunbar concluded by asking each driver to keep his vehicle under control at all times by adjusting speed to existing conditions.

Safe Driver Award Won by Carson MP

Post demonstrated his driving ability in an outstanding manner many times since his assignment to the company, his award stated.

Specially considered was that a military policeman's duties involve driving a vehicle at all hours of the day or night, under all types of conditions. When other vehicles are grounded due to weather conditions, military police are required to continue their patrols.

Post won the award by demonstrating alertness and caution in his driving habits. With the cetrificate for safe driving, Post received two safety seat belts for his private vehicle.

PERFORMANCE AWARDED — Two Air Force Academy Library staff members receive performance awards from Library executive officer, 1st Lt. J. A. Heise. Receiving awards are Mrs. Lela Batey, clerk-stenographer in the Administrative Section, and Miss Alice C. Hayes, community librarian. Mrs. Batey earned a quality step increase and outstanding performance award; Miss Hayes, an outstanding performance rating and sustained superior performance award. Also present was Col. George V. Fagan, Library director. (Air Force Photo)

Pikes Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

An article in a popular magazine has set me to thinking.

It is entitled, "This Curious Custom of Going Steady."

The article was written by a father who deplored the custom in the high schools, and while I have never been called a daddy, nevertheless that fact has not prevented me from having some ideas of my very own. I too, think "going steady" causes our boys and girls of high school age to miss a lot of good times, makes them poor students besides being likely to interfere with the happiness of their future.

My class in the Colorado Springs high school was graduated with 25 and we all thought then and have often agreed since that no class ever had more class spirit nor any more delightful picnics and parties than did we. Others might have had as much but we stoutly maintained that none had more.

None of us had steadies, excepting Gertrude, the prettiest girl in the whole school, whose social time was taken over by a boy in one of the upper classes. Frank was a captain in the cadet company and of course none of the privates, corporals, nor sergeants would dare to encroach on holy ground, with the consequences that Gertrude often had no escort when our "strictly class" affairs were held.

Frank and Gertrude were married the June that she was graduated and so far as the world ever knew they lived happily ever after, some of the girls envied her, some of us did not.

The "thinking" that I have been doing since reading that magazine article lets me realize that I have in my box of memories many fond recollections of the several boy friends who made my school days very pleasant. I don't believe that any one boy could have furnished the variety of good times that came to me. For instance, who but Lewis, the boy who later became a mining engineer, could make our rambles into the hills, so instructive and interesting. He could give all the long names that must be used to explain the earth's formation, could tell the why and the wherefore of the paleozoic age, the history of the fossils; the disintegration of the granite and the plutonic origin of quartz and feldspar. But Lewis was too serious a student to waste any time at Whitbeck's Dancing Academy on the second floor of the Out West building on East Pikes Peak Avenue. Clyde was much better at that, and also Clyde was editor of the Lever, the school paper, and as one of the reporters, and assistant editor, I had much to learn from him on the art of publishing and writing for newspapers.

Melville was my standby when it came to geometry problems. Melville could explain a theorem better than could any of our teachers and was always willing to be of help. He was a firm believer in the "no steady for me" crowd.

For a well-dressed, escort to a party, where politeness, decorum and a proper consciousness of one's responsibilities, give me Frank A. every time. He never failed to be at the foot of the stairs when I came down with my wraps on and all ready to assure the mother of the girl who had given the party that "I had a delightful evening." Once when Albert had asked for my company to attend a party I had a most humiliating ten minutes trying to get him away from a couple of girls who were staying on to a late hour to help the hostess with the dishes. That evening I sure wished for Frank.

My photograph albums are bulging with snap shots of the outings we had with Curt, as our ever-ready photographer, and had I been "going steady" with any one I might not have had so many pictures to enjoy today.

As for hay-rides into the moonlighted Garden of the Gods, it took a strong arm to lift us girls skillfully and pleasantly over the sides of the hay-rack and stand us on our feet without a jar. Pierre was the best one at that and since all of us were unattached and possibly able to admire his strength Pierre enjoyed his task immensely.

A year ago while visiting our pretty Gertrude, she who had but one beau the whole time she was in high school, I asked her for her ideas about "going steady" with just one boy. Gertrude is a little widow now and has been for several years.

"I have been happy with Frank but I often think that had I other boy friends while I was a girl, could have had more good times especially while I was in high school. If I had had it to do over again, I should have done differently."

And there you have it. "Play the field," Dr. Ben Lehmberg has told the young people that listen to his Sunday sermons, "for then you will know better what you want in a life partner. You will have more to choose from and an opportunity to learn what characteristics, what qualifications you desire for a life's companionship."

As yet nobody has dared to suggest that a boy or a girl might fall in love too young for their own welfare, only the divorce courts are considering that. But it seems to some of us older ones that "going steady is like playing on the brink of matrimony long before school days are over and before judgments are mature, a hazard that could be avoided if all our high school youngsters would only "Play the Field."

Looking back over the years that have elapsed since ou graduation we find that nearl all the girls married, while onl one of the boys has remaine single. All the other boys wer married at least once and on twice, with two of them accomplishing the feat thre times. And who is to say tha some where along the way the did not ask again for some c those left-over girls. It is jus possible that they did.

Fertility Recovered After Radiation Accident

Five men who became sterile as a result of a radiation accident at one of the Oak Ridge, Tenn., nuclear plants have recovered good potential fertility, it was reported today in the current (Feb. 29) Journal of the American Medical Association.

Authors of the report were John MacLeod, Ph.D., Robert S. Hotchkiss, M.D., and Beecher W. Sitterson, M.D., New York City.

Of 8 men injured in the June 16, 1958 accident, the five who received the greatest amount of radiation (236 to 235 rads) became sterile within nine months and remained sterile for more than two years, according to the Journal article.

Three years and five months after the accident, reproductive capacity of the five men "ranged from satisfactory to excellent as measured by all available standards," the researchers said.

A review of male fertility data on all recorded cases of sublethal nuclear radiation accidents clearly shows that relatively small amounts of radiation will produce pronounced effects on the sperm (male sex cells)-producing organs but that ultimate recovery of some degree of fertility is possible in most, if not all, of suchcases, most, if not all, of such cases.

It is clear that damage to the reproductive tissue, while much more protracted than that to other tissues, is reversible, an accompanying Journal editorial said. It is impossible to speculate upon genetic effects, the editorial pointed out, altho the superficial shape of mature male sex cells after recovery does not seem to be affected.

At the time of the accident, the five men who received the heaviest dose of radiation ranged in age from 33 to 51. All were married and had from one to four children each. None has fathered a child since the accident, the report indicates.

MARKSMEN HONORED — Two members of the Army Air Defense Command's Advanced Marksmanship Unit wear the bronze "excellence in competition" badges they have been awarded for their showings in recent rifle marksmanship tournaments. Spec. 4 Charles P. Nelson (second from left) won his badge for placing in the ARADCOM Small Arms Tournament last spring at Fort Carson. Spec. 4 Gary E. Case Reports Show Education Therapy Value

The value of educational therapy in helping children with learning difficulties is demonstrated in three cases reported in the current American Journal of Diseases of Children, published by the American Medical Association.

An article by Russell Sands, M.D., Santa Monica, Calif., and Marianne Frostig, Ph.D., and David Horne, B.A., Los Angeles describes the cooperative efforts of the pediatrician and a school of educational therapy.

A graphic case of improvement was that of an eight - year - old girl referred to the therapy center after showing signs of a severe school phobia for two years. She was retarded in muscular coordination, visual perception, and education, and could not tie a knot or bow, skip or hop, read or write, or copy simple drawings.

At the center she was given special training in deficient areas and academic subjects were taught by methods which compensated for her perceptual difficulties.

After one year at the center, she was able to return to public school. In her second semester, she earned A grades in all subjects except physical education and arts and crafts, in which she earned B's.

A seven - year - old boy referred to the school because of learning difficulties and behavior disorders presented a slightly different problem. Although he had poor vision and some physical disability, these were not major handicaps. However, his achievement level was six months below the rest of his second grade classmates.

It soon became apparent that his parents' attitude toward him exaggerated the importance of his minor impairment and made him feel worthless and inadequate.

After attending the therapy school, he was able to enter the third grade working at grade level. But he was only able to benefit from this training after his parents joined one of the school's parent-discussion groups and changed their attitude toward him.

The third case involved a preschool age child. The boy, examined at age four and one - half, had lost some motor coordination after a fall and walked with an abnormal gait. Intellectual impairment was feared because he screamed without reason and did not seem to understand, or be able to communicate with his mother.

However, testing showed his intellectual functioning was normal and educational therapy was begun. He was given special training to enhance coordination and was taught to pay attention and accept direction.

"At the end of one year he entered public school kindergarten — suffering only a slight disadvantage in games requiring balance," the authors said. "In tasks involving space perception and visuomotor planning, he was ahead of his age level. He is now seven years old and has maintained excellent progress."

Without timely treatment, this child may well have experienced failure in public school, they added.

Century Mark Is Passed by Dow Jones

NEW YORK (AP)—The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks on the New York Stock Exchange has passed a new century mark to stand above 800 for the first time.

The average, widely regarded as an index to the movement of the over-all market, closed Friday at 800.14, up 3.10.

It had passed 700 in 1961, 600 in 1959, and 500 in 1956.

Many market followers pay special heed to such benchmarks on the theory that they may be a psychological spur to other investors, either to buy or to sell.

The rise Friday came on a final-hour rally that caused the ticker tape to lag behind transactions.

The index reflects the prices, with many adjustments for stock splits and other changes over the years, of 30 blue chip stocks. The index has crossed 800 several times recently during the day, but until Friday was never that high when the market closed.

And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus. And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee: The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI)—A square in the center of Zagreb University's School of Economics was named John Fitzgerald Kennedy Plaza Thursday, according to the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug.

Carson Unit Noted as Tops In Action

One of the smallest Ft. Carson units, the 94th Ordance Detachment, has distinguished itself as one of the more active groups on post, performing a mission that is both dangerous and necessary.

The 94th deals in explosives. More specifically, they deal in explosives that should have gone off, and didn't. Thruout the year the unit queries about strange objects that look as though they might be dangerous.

In 1963 the 94th destroyed 55,000 rounds of ammunition, mostly in connection with on-post firing range clearance.

But the unit's responsibility doesn't stop at Fort Carson's boundaries. The demolition experts answered 55 calls off-post in the Pikes Peak area. To handle these calls, they travelled 11,000 miles in Colorado.

A large portion of the 94th's duties lies in clearing potentially dangerous war trophies (pistols, rifles, grenades) for exhibition. In this capacity they journeyed 2,400 miles in '63.

The one officer and eight enlisted men of the 94th traveled another 1,300 miles conducting classes for civilian law enforcement officials and firemen, showing them safety procedures in handling unexploded items.

Civilians who encounter suspicious objects they feel might be unexploded are urged to contact their local law enforcement or fire departments, who will then take necessary action, which could involve requesting the aid of Ft. Carson's 94th Ordnance Detachment.

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

By CAROL JOHNSON

Senior students interested in attending Colorado State University in Fort Collins were able to see the campus on a special outing to that school which the Wasson counseling department organized. This trip took place last Tuesday from 8 a.m. to about 5 p.m.

Two buses were taken to accomodate the seniors taking the trip, which took about three hours each way because of snow and icy roads.

Students attended an orientation meeting in the student union building and then split into groups of about 18 each for a tour of the campus.

After the tour the group met in the coed dormitory on campus for lunch.

Saturday a group of about 18 National Honor Society members attended a conference at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Topic of this conference was "The Challenge of Tomorrow." Members were to attend various panel discussions Saturday morning, on "Conformity or Creativity in Your Life — A Challenge to Growth"; "The World of 1980 — What Will Your Life Be Like?"; "Preparing for Your Life Outside of your Career"; and "Your Responsibilities in an International World."

Conferees were to select two of these panels to attend. After the panel discussions, students were taken on a tour of the campus, while an organization meeting was held for the advisers.

In the afternoon students could attend either of three lectures — a discussion of arts and sciences honors programs and a sample honors seminar; a discussion of engineering honors programs and a simple seminar; or a panel discussion: "Is a Liberal Arts Education really practical in today's world of specilization?" The day, beginning at 6:15 a.m. for Wasson students, ended officially at 2:40 with the clsoing comments.

The Wasson Homemaker's Club will discuss the life of a stewardess at their Tuesday meeting. This special program will feature a film about the vocation. A panel of former stewardesses, composed of Mrs. Edward Warren, Mrs. Mathew Presty, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Newet Beck, and Mrs. Alfred Gill will discuss the career. These women all belong to a club for former stewardesses, the Kiwi Club. This meeting will concern the training, qualifications, and applications for the job.

Students interested in taking a language spoken by 200 million people can take this course next fall. The Course in Russian, taught by Robert McClain, is the first to be taught at a high school in Colorado Springs. The course is open to all students, but those interested are advised to have at least two years of foreign languages learning Russian. Russian is so difficult because of its Cyrillic alphabet of 33 figures.

Various departments at Wasson are now beginning plans for the school's celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birthday of the poet and dramatist William Shakespeare.

The English department has charge of the background material and over - all organization of the program; the drama department will furnish the actors while the art department will supply the posters and scenery. The industrial arts department will make the set properties; music for the program will be supplied by the music department while the physical education will train the jesters and May Day dancers.

This program, for both the students and the public, is scheduled for April 22. It will consist of a festival including a skit of a typical London day, an excerpt from Macbeth, Punch and Judy show, jesters, and the May dance and madrigal singers.

The topic for discussion at the last Parents' Discussion Group held last Tuesday at 7:30 in the student center was "Leisuretime Activities for Teenagers in Our City." A panel of city residents and school students discussed this topic before it was turned over for general discussion.

LONDON — A British village has been stopped by court order from selling second hand police uniforms at public auction.

Ray Werner To Chair UF Committee

When a new agency wishes to join the United Fund its the responsibility of the Admissions and Allocations Committee to determine its qualifications and report its findings to the Board of Trustees. Ray O. Werner, associate professor of economics at Colorado College, was appointed this week by United Fund president James D. Russell to chair this important committee.

"Any agency in the health, welfare and recreational field may apply as a member of the United Fund," Werner said.

"If that agency meets the criteria established by the Board of Trustees it will be accepted. It is the responsibility of the Admissions and Allocations committee to determine whether it meets these standards or not. This is a safeguard for the giving public which wants its contributions to the United Fund to go to worthwhile programs," he added.

An equally important responsibility of the committee is the allocations of funds. Under Werners direction a committee of twenty community leaders will soon be meeting regularly, assigning members to study individual agency programs and budgets. Following the campaign this committee will then recommend allocations to the United Fund Board of Trustees.

"Every agency could spend more money on more worthwhile projects than the campaign raises in the drive each fall. It is our job to determine which projects should receive priority and to allocate the available funds in a way that will assure the community the most for its money," he pointed out.

"We couldn't have found anyone more expert in the field of economics to head this committee," James Russell said in making the appointment.

Werner received his BA degree in economics from Hastings College, Hastings, Nebr. Both his MA and PH D degrees were earned at the University of Nebraska.

He is a member of a variety of state and national economic associations. He has been a member of the Colorado College faculty since 1948.

Werner and his wife, Donna, are the parents of three boys. They live at 2024 Downing Dr.

Move to Seat Negro Is Failure

DENVER (AP) — Two members of the Denver School Board tried unsuccessfully here to win a place on the board for a Negro.

Vice President A. Edgar Benton and Mrs. Allegra Saunders dissented in a 4-2 vote that placed Robert S. McCollum in a seat vacated Sept. 16 by the death of Frank A. Traylor.

Mrs. Saunders said she would have liked a chance to vote for either Mrs. Rachel Noel or State Sen. George Brown, D-Denver, both of whom are Negroes. Benton told the board that Negroes must not be content with advances in race relations made in the last 20 years.

McCollum is a former Denver city councilman. He is vice chancellor for public affairs at the University of Denver.

INCURABLE

ATASCADERO, Calif. (UPI)—Peeping Toms apparently cannot be helped by hospital treatment, according to a recent five-year study of all sex offenders paroled from Atascadero State Hospital.

The report showed that while hospitalization apparently is useful in treating most sex offenders, Peeping Tom just keeps peeping. The study showed that most peeping toms who were re-arrested committed the offense in their first year on parole.

CU Scientists Get $50,000 Science Grant

Two University of Colorado scientists have received a $50,000 U. S. Air Force grant to continue their study of solar ultraviolet radiation in the earth's upper atmosphere.

Prof. William A. Rense and Frederick C. Wilshusen, co-directors of CU's Laboratory for Atmospheric and Space Physics, are recipients of the grant. They have been working with Dr. Adolph Jursa of the Air Force Cambridge Research Center Geophysics Directorate since 1948.

The new grant provides funds for rocket probes 130 miles into the earth's upper atmosphere. They will be launched in June and in November from the White Sands, N. M., Missile Range.

The scientists hope to uncover more data on solar ultraviolet radiation and to investigate the composition of the upper atmospheric region.

Instruments in the rockets' nose cones record information which is analyzed after the intruments float back to earth on a parachute.

Rense said the study of ultraviolet radiation was almost nonexistent until missile activity increased after World War II. The study led to the establishment of the CU laboratory 16 years ago.

Citizens Will Discuss 'Project School Child'

Project School Child, a Colorado Citizens Study of Education, starts this week in School District No. 11.

Mrs. Robert Mendenhall, District 11 Chairman of Project School Child, met last week with Thomas Doherty, Superintendent of District 11, and Dr. William Greer, School Board Member, in order to obtain facts about the local school district. These local school facts will be included as part of the overall discussion of Colorado's educational problems.

Project School Child is a study-discussion program designed to provide the citizens of Colorado with the opportunity to better acquaint themselves with their local school problems and to make recommendations for improving the education process.

Study-discussion participants will be given free booklets containing information about educational goals, school finance, curriculum, staffing and materials. The participants will read the material, meet and discuss the topics, and then express their opinions on prepared opinions questionnaries. Thes opinions will later be tabulated and the results distributed on a state-wdie basis for direction in education for the future.

Any interested citizen may participate in a discussion group. In most instances, discussion leaders have been designated and have attended an orientation meeting. Mrs. Mendenhall suggested that any person interested in joining or forming a discussion group should contact her for information regarding time and place schedules of existing groups as there is no set pattern for groups thruout the district.

She also stated that the fact sheets on School District 11 educational goals have been mailed to discussion leaders. Any discussion leader who has not received a fact sheet by Friday should contact Mrs. Mendenhall at 633-2326.

Palmer Will Inaugurate Leture Program

Palmer High School will inaugurate a faculty lecture program, Monday with a lecture by Richard Winternitz of the school's Science Department.

In the seven scheduled lectures, faculty members will speak on a wide range of subjects to enrich the regular school curriculum. Some lecturers will cover topics not included in the curriculum; others will offer a different point of view of subjects taught in the classroom.

All lectures will be given in the school's General Palmer Room, starting at 3 p.m., Mondays. Attendance by students is entirely voluntary.

Winternitz's opening lecture is titled "Limnology and Fisheries Management," in which he will deal with such problems as overstocking, weed control, and trash fish populations in lakes and ponds.

Now a teacher of biology at Palmer, Winternitz was formerly a biologist with the Colorado Game and Fish Department. Since 1953 he has been president of Fisheries Research Inc. The firm does biological surveys and fisheries management work for owners of private lakes and ponds thruout Colorado.

He received his AB degree in zoology from Colorado College and did graduate work at the University of Missouri Wildlife School. In 1962 he received a master of arts in teaching degree from Colorado College. In addition to teaching at Palmer, he is a biology laboratory instructor for the University of Colorado Extension Center.

In succeeding weeks, lecturers will cover such diverse topics as "styles and Trends in Contemporary Music," "Unity in Disunity: Buddhism," "From Here to Infinity," and "Art's Answer to the Problems of Living."

Joseph L. Watson, Palmer High principal, says the lecture program is a result of the student interest in the lectures on philosophy given earlier this year by Virgil Hoff of the English Department.

Plans are already underway to resume the lecture program next fall. Appropriately enough, the opening lecture in the fall series will be entitled "Football from the Spectator's Point of View."

Molester Is Foiled By Traffic Policeman

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—A traffic patrolman kept a man from throwing an 11-year-old girl off a 100-foot bluff after the girl had been molested Friday.

MRS. JOYCE FOLSOM

Club Names Handicapper Of the Month

The Stalwarts and Pals Club has named Mrs. Joyce Folsom, 726 Zion Dr., their "Handicapper of the Month" for February. Mrs. Folson contracted polio five years ago while in Adana, Turkey, with her Air Force husband, Chief Warrant Officer Jim Folsom of Ent Air Force Base.

She has been confined to a wheel chair ever since, but says she found out early that you do for yourself or do without.

Admitting that she felt sorry for herself at first, Mrs. Folsom overcame this defeatist attitude and started "doing." She does her own housework, takes care of husband Jim and son Bob, 12, knits as a hobby, and bowls.

Her husband was an avid bowler and she found she either stayed home, or went with him. She chose to go and while the couple was stationed in California, managed to establish an average of 119.

She helped to organize a handicapped children's bowling program here with the Parks and Recreation Department, and is repeating this program among wheel-chair confined persons, as well as planning a program of square dancing for wheelchair persons.

"I'm doomed to spinning my wheels," Mrs. Folsom laughs, but she spins them to accomplish worthwhile activities.

High School Students in Poster Contest

High School art students of El Paso county are competing during February and March for a $20 prize for the best design in a poster advertising the forthcoming Colorado Springs Flower and Garden Show, to be held June 25 and 26 at the City Auditorium.

The prize is offered by the Broadmoor Garden Club which is sponsoring the show. Fred S. Bartlett, director of the Colo- Springs Fine Arts Center, will judge the entries. The contest closes April 1.

Noted Pianist To Be Featured In Local Concert

David Burge, nationally acclaimed pianist and composer, will be the featured artist in the next Colorado College concert Next Sunday, at 4:00 p.m. in Perkins Hall.

Burge, who teaches at the University of Colorado, is one of the foremost interpreters of contemporary music and will play a program of living American composers, including his own Second Piano Sonata, composed in 1958.

He has been touring this country annually for five years, receiving superlative reviews everywhere, including Carnegie Recital Hall in New York City.

He has given numerous first performances of works by many leading composers. Ernst Krenek has written about Burge: "There is hardly anyone in his generation who plays my piano works with such congenial understanding and conviction." Vincent Persichetti has called his playing " a complete joy. . . .a rare privilege to listen to twentieth century music played with such understanding and enthusiasm."

During 1963 Burge was piano soloist at the First International Webern Festival in Seattle, gave a lecture recital at the national convention of the Music Teachers Association in Chicago and played a concert in the National Gallery in Washington, D. C., commemorating United Nations Day.

This spring, Burge will play a concert of American piano music at the National Gallery in Washington for the twenty - first Festival of American Music. He will also be heard in a series of programs of new music over WBAI radio New York. A televised lecture recital of his is now being shown over educational TV stations in the East. During the summer he will be concertizing in Europe, playing contemporary music for Radio Cologne.

Among the composers on the program for Perkins Hall are two of his colleagues at Colorado University who will be present at the concert on March 8: Dennis Riley, who is the music critic for the Rocky Mountain News and is presently studying at CU, and George Crumb of the regular faculty.

Works by Aaron Copland, Salvatore Martirano, Vincent Persichetti and George Rochberg will complete the program of this unusual concert. Burge will give short explanations of each work which will greatly assist the listeners in following the new styles and techniques of composing.

The concert will be open to the public free of charge.

Librum Exhibit To Open at Art Center Today

A retrospective exhibition of the paintings of artist Rico Lebrun will open at the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center today remaining on view thru March.

The Italian-born artist, who has lived in this country since the early 1920s, currently lives and works in Southern California. The exhibition was organized by the Fine Arts Patrons of Newport Harbor, Calif. in collaboration with the Newport Harbor Service League.

Henry J. Seldis, art critic for the "Los Angeles Times," says of this exhibition. . ."fundamental to the profound impact made by the show, concentrating as it does on the artist's work of the past 10 years, is its demonstration of a shift in both concept and execution which has brought this powerful artist ever closer to greatness."

Among his more important works is the large "Crucifixion" series of painting and drawings done in the late 1940s which won numerous awards and culminated in a large one-man show at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

In 1956 and 1957 he painted the Buchenwald series, protesting the atrocities committed at the German concentration camps of Buchenwald and Dachau.

Also in this exhibition are some of his drawings based on Dante's "Inferno." In 1960 he was commissioned to do the well known "Genesis" mural at Claremont College, Claremont, Calif.

Lebrun has received the Joint Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation Fellowship three times, the latest in 1962-63. Among other awards, he has received the Lippincott Prize from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts for 1962, the Award of Merit from the American Academy of Arts and Letters and second prize in "American Painting Today," from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

His paintings are owned by such museums as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, the Fogg Museum in Cambridge, Mass., the Los Angeles County Museum, the Cleveland Museum of Art and the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco.

Another one-man exhibition which just opened and will hang thru March, is of the paintings and prints of young Nathan Oliveira, also of California.

The works of this artist, a lecturer at UCLA, are primarily concerned with the human figure.

The third March exhibition, which opens Wednesday, is a collection of the recent works of Henry Koerner, who arrives this week as artist in residence during the month of March.

Car Thefts Reach All Time Record In January

The National Automobile Theft Bureau today reported that 36,115 cars were stolen in January, the greatest number ever in a single month. Thefts were up 16 per cent over last January.

NATB Secretary Ray M. King said that the record number of thefts will leave car-owners with a bill running into the millions of dollars. Noting that usually about one out of every ten stolen cars is never recovered, King estimated that the cost of January thefts would be at least $3.4 million.

He pointed out, however, that motorists would have to bear the burden of additional millions of dollars in expenses to repair damage to those cars which eventually are recovered. King noted that thieves increasingly are being attracted to expensive parts such as high-performance engines, four-speed transmissions, special hub-caps and bucket seats.

The costs for these parts range from $100 for a set of hub-caps to upwards of $500 for a transmission, representing a considerable loss for the motorists who must pay for replacements.

Because of the sharp increase in thefts of expensive parts, King advised motorists to arrange to have them identified by special markings. He said these markings help investigators identify stolen cars and arrange for their return to the rightful owners. They also make it possible for investigators to determine ownership of parts that have been removed from an auto.

Wasson PTA Will Hold Legislation Symposium

The Wasson High School PTA will hold a legislation symposium at the Wasson High School auditorium, Thursday at 8:00 p.m. All PTA members in the county are invited to attend.

A panel of six speakers will discuss various items in the National Congress of Parent and Teachers Legislation Program.

Federal Aid to Education, expanded public health services and the United Nations will be discussed in particular. However, questions from the audience may bring other parts of the legislation program into the discussion.

The symposium speakers are Dr. Bentley Gilbert, the Rev. William B. Leonard, Jr., Dr. M. F. Schafer, Dr. Edward H. Vincent, John Gallagher and Roger M. Coffin. Michael Birenall will moderate the symposium.

The purpose of the symposium is to make it convenient for all members of the PTA in El Paso County to become oriented on the content and intent of the proposed National PTA Legislation Program, and to have information upon which to base their vote on items in the Program.

The National Legislation Program will be voted on by delegates at the Colorado PTA Convention in April in Fort Collins. Local Units may instruct their delegates as to how they should vote.

The speakers are all well qualified to present factual information on their respective subjects. This Symposium should be especially helpful to members who would like to attend the state PTA Convention as voting delegates.

Salvation Army Group Notes 75th Anniversary

By BYRON AKERS

As the first event in observance of the 75th anniversary of the Salvation Army in Colorado Springs, the organization's local advisory board will hold its annual board and civic recognition dinner meeting Friday in the Zebulon Pike Room of the Antlers Hotel.

Speaker at the anniversary dinner will be Capt. Robert Stillwell, education officer of the Salvation Army School for Officers Traning in San Francisco. A brigade of cadets from the Officers Training School will participate in the meeting.

This civic recognition dinner meeting is open to the public. Tickets are available by calling the Salvation Army office, 633-5519.

Harold Whitney, Advisory Board chairman, will act as master of ceremonies. Mayor Harrry Hoth will extend civic greetings. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Sig Burch, president of the Ministerial Alliance and pastor of Trinity Methodist Church. The benediction will be given by Chaplin (Col.) George Cameron of the Air Force Academy. Brigadier Victor Newbould, divisional commander of the Salvation Army with headquarters in Denver, will introduce the speaker.

Capt. Stillwell, the guest speaker, has a long background in the Salvation Army. His grandparents were pioneer officers on the West Coast, going to California in 1883 to start Salvation Army work in many far western cities.

In his college days, Capt. Stillwell was star end on the University of Southern California football team, earning coast and national honors in 1947, '48 and '49.

After graduation he turned to coaching. He was head coach at Santa Monica, one of the nation's foremost high schools. He holds a master of science degree in education from USC. Among his past achievements was the award as Young Man of the Year in Santa Monica.

It was 75 years ago that the Salvation Army established its first post in Colorado Springs. The beginning, under the leadership of Mrs. Adiutant A. Gifford, was small, and many difficulties had to be overcome before the Salvation Army was accepted as an integral and valuable asset to the community.

During the intervening three-quarters of a century, the Colorado Springs Salvation Army Corps has carried out its policy of giving spiritual help and physical succor to the needy, regardless of race or creed. Its activities here have expanded to keep pace with the community's growth and attendant problems.

Today the Colorado Springs Corps has its own headquarters and chapel at the corner of Colorado Avenue and Weber Street and carried on its varied spiritual and welfare programs under the command of Maj. and Mrs. Wilfred Mahy.

Over-all guidance of the corps activities is provided by an advisory board composed of leading business and professional men and women. This phase of the Salvation Army shares in the community's generosity to the United Fund.

The other phase of the Salvation Army program here is the Men's Social Center, which recently established new quarters in what was the Kennebach Hotel, Cascade Avenue and Cucharras Street. Under the guidance of Maj. Charles Griffin, men housed in the Social Center undergo a program of work therapy and rehabilitation designed to restore them to useful lives.

The Men's Social Center is self-supporting thru funds from the sale of donated clothing and other articles, repaired by men undergoing rehabilitation. The Men's Social Center does not share in the United Fund.

Besides providing vocal and instrumental music at the dinner meeting March 6, the brigade of cadets will conduct the program at the Pikes Peak Kiwanis meeting Thursday noon.

The cadets also will conduct evangelist services at the Salvation Army chapel, 102 S. Weber St., at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday during the coming week and at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. on next Sunday.

Maj. Mahy, commanding officer of the Salvation Army in Colorado Springs also announced the cadets will visit several nursing homes on Friday and will conduct a noon hour open air meeting in Acacia Park that day, weather permitting.

Wilbur Funeral Held at Holy Spirit Chapel

Funeral services for Mrs. Matthew Hall Wilbur (Bertha Jungk), owner of the Wilbur Suit Co. store, 112 N. Tejon St., who died Tuesday, at 91, were held at the Chapel of the Holy Spirit at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The Rev. Arthur Pierpoint officiated. Burial was in Evergreen Cemetery.

Mrs. Wilbur was a pioneer in the business life of Colorado Springs and was at her desk right up to Saturday, Feb. 22, managing the business. On Monday she left her home, 1806 N. Tejon St., and walked to a waiting ambulance. She was taken to a local hospital, where she died peacefully the next day. She is remembered for her generous nature, fun loving disposition and firm determination, and was a remarkable business woman. Her employes said of her that "she had a will to do, and she did it."

She had had charge of the millinery department of the store before her marriage to Mr. Wilbur and she never relinquished her determination that her customers should be well hatted. Up to the time of her death she made several trips to New York a year to buy stylish hats. It was characteristic of her that she never stepped out of the store or her home without a hat on her head. Many of her customers were granddaughters of society leaders who had bought their hats at the store in the 1901 period.

Mrs. Wilbur was born in Cella, Germany, July 7, 1872. She came to America with her parents and learned the millinery business in St. Louis, Mo. On a buying trip to New York she met Mr. Wilbur and the former late Mrs. Wilbur and was offered a position as head of the millinery department of the Wilbur Suit Co. in 1901. She made many buying trips to Paris, sometimes as often as twice a year. She and Mr. Wilbur were married in December, 1925. He died in 1942 and since then she had managed the business. She was recognized as a highly skilled business woman. She was a member of the Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Wilbur is survived by a brother, Herman J. Jungk, of Alton, Ill.; a son-in-law, Herschel Hildreth, Colorado Springs; five nieces, Miss Catherine Jungk and Mrs. Helen Bryant, both of Kirkwood, Mo.; Mrs. Anne Stafford, Decatur, Ill.; Mrs. Crawford M. Scott, Colorado Springs, and Mrs. Bertha Marie Riskorski, Alton, Ill., and four nephews, Carl Jungk, Alton, Ill.; Adolph Jungk, Jerseyville, Ill.; Charles Jungk, Alton, Ill., and Herman J. Jungk, Ridgefield, Wash.

Candy Lovers: Stay Away! Russians Charge $2 a Bar

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of four articles presented by the El Paso County Heart Association and being run by the Gazette Telegraph to inform the public about progress being made in the fight against heart and blood vessel disease.)

By C. D. BAXSTRESSER

MOSCOW — Lunch is eaten between 12 and 1. There is a small restaurant about one-half mile from here but it is crowded and the food is not particularly good, and so I usually go out and buy the "makings" of lunch.

I have a jar of Russian mustard, a jar of American catsup (which I "borrowed" from the American club), a small electric coffee pot, and some of the basic utensils necessary for lunch. A typical lunch is milk, sausage, and watermelon for the four of us (my associate Fred Huber, myself, and the two interpreters) for about $1.80.

Coffee, on the other hand, is quite expensive. It is not sold in pounds cans but in much smaller containers. I would estimate that a pound of coffee here would cost about $3.

If it has any makings of a special occasion, we will inevitably buy the interpreters a small chocolate bar. Of all the items in Moscow that are high priced chocolate is right at the top of the list. A chocolate bar roughly the size of one that we can purchase in Los Angeles for 15 cents sells for $2 here.

After lunch we hit the three most productive hours of the working day. For some reason the directors are here continually in the morning but when they leave for lunch they are gone and we expect them not to return much before 3:30 or one half hour before quitting time. The workers are then free to perform their skills and generally in that period of time between 1 and 3:30 we accomplish a great deal.

Even the smallest details of this installation however require constant supervision. This is ticularly true of the steam, water, and air piping. We have electricians on the job and they are quite competent and require little or no supervision. The same might be said for the sheet metal men.

At 3:30 the directors appear once more and the minute that they start appearing we are thru for the day. The workers know that 4 o'clock is the end of the working day and begin to take lengthy cigaret breaks or engage in or listen to the conversations between the directors and myself.

The food at the hotel restaurant while it is not bad, is certainly not good. There is absolutely no variety on the menu, there are never any changes on the menu, and it is absolutely unheard of to have a special for a day or even a week.

Basically the menu is divided into four sections. Salads, but these are not made of lettuce etc. but rather of cucumbers and some type of cold fish, meat, or chicken. They are always liberally plastered with the heaviest mayonnaise I have tasted and not very palitable.

The second section of the menu is soups, and the soup here is just excellent.

Our restaurant serves four different kinds of soup, boullion, chicken noodle, borscht and a soup called solinaka which I have really learned to like, and I usually have a bowl of it each evening.

Solinaka is made of five different types of meat, 10 different types of vegetable, sour cream, slices of fresh lemon, black and green olives, and pickles in it to mention just some of the ingredients. I have secured from the chef of the restaurant the recipe for solinaka and am presently having it translated.

Just because I feel I should eat something after the solinaka, I usually will have one of the meat courses, there being available, veal, pork, and mutton in fried slices. Accompanying them are fried potatoes and sweet peas altho I strongly believe that the sweet peas are of the dry variety and then boiled strenuously because they are very small, very hard, and very tough.

With dinner there is Russian bread both white and black, and butter. Sometimes I have ice cream (which is excellent) and always two cups of coffee. This type of dinner costs in the neighborhood of three rubles plus tip.

Dinner takes from 1½ to 3 hours depending upon your waitress and the speed with which you choose to eat. On nights when there is nothing to do (and that is about 9 out of 10 nights) it is desirable to take as long as possible because it is a pleasant time for conversation and relaxation.

The weather here is still pretty good and it is not too cold in the evening to enjoy a walk. So when dinner is thru it has become my custom to walk a mile or so before retiring for the evening.

All in all it is less than a stimulating existence and I truthfully miss the American periodicals as well as the availibility of paper backs for interesting reading. The fact of the matter is I am even beginning to miss our "vast wasteland" of television.

What makes things doubly hard is the fact that with the exception of my associate here and the military at the American club there are no other Americans to visit with or talk with. With the summer season over and the tourists having left, you don't meet Americans other than the personnel of the military at the American Club.

Surprisingly enough it would appear that the American embassy here employs very few Americans. I have met nine people who have worked at the Embassy and of the nine, only three are Americans, two of them are Danish, one is West German, three are Canadians.

I can't understand the whys and wherefores of this situation, it would seem to me that with our national unemployment problem that it would behoove our State Department to employ Americans in their foreign embassies. It certainly costs no more and it is certainly no cheaper to hire librarians, clerk typists, cooks and miscellaneous clerical help from the United States, than it does from Ottawa, West Berlin, or Copenhagen.

Actually I haven't met one person who was employed in a clerical position in our Embassy who is from the United States. I don't think that this is true of the other Embassies. It would appear to me that all members of the, for example, Italian Embassy are Italians. This is an area I would like to look into in a little more detail and see if there can't be some logical explanation or justifiable reason.

New Zale Executives Elected

Zale Jewelry Co. last week named five new vice-presidents and five assistant vice-presidents.

The new executive appointments, said Zale President Ben A. Lipshy, are designed to gear the company's operations for future expansion and to improve current supervision of Zale's greater number of stores. Since the start of the fiscal year last April 1, Zale's has added nearly 40 units. In the previous fiscal year, the company took on a record 73 stores.

Lipshy said that Donald Zale, treasurer of the Dallas-based firm, will become vice-president and treasurer.

Other vice presidents include Lew D. Zale, formerly of Los Angeles and California stores supervisor, who will head up the wholesale division; Burley Bullock of San Antonio, southern region store supervisor; Robert Mothner, Los Angeles, western region supervisor; and William Zale, Dallas, who will be in charge of special services out of the company's Dallas office.

Elevated to assistant vice president were three Zale division district store supervisors. They are Fred Cohan, Miami; Harry Landesman, Oklahoma City; and Bernie Shipper, Knoxville.

Also named assistant vice president was Willis Cowlishaw, who recently moved to Dallas to assume supervisory duties under Leo Fields, vice president of the Fine Jewelers Guild division.

Allen Ginsberg of the company's New York office also was named assistant vice president. He will head up Zale's group of diamond purchasing offices in this country and abroad.

In addition to the newly elected officers, two other Zale vice presidents were given new titles. They are Sidney Lipshy, formerly eastern region supervisor, and James L. Wilson, formerly responsible for sales promotion; both of whom will be assigned special services.

Braniff Airways To Buy Boeing 720 Jetliner

Braniff International Airways has announced plans to further expand its jet schedules with the purchase of a four-engine Boeing 720 jetliner for delivery this fall.

The 110-passenger aircraft will be placed in service in October as the 10th Boeing Super Jet in the Braniff fleet. Exact new schedules are not known at this time, a Braniff spokesman said, but the 720 will be used to increase jet service on medium and long range Braniff routes in the United States.

Braniff, which recently expanded to 14 its order for new BAC One-Eleven twin jets for use on the shorter routes, said the acquisition of the additional Boeing Super Jet brought to 33 the number of turbine-powered aircraft Braniff now has in its present fleet and on order.

The first of the One-Eleven fleet will be placed in service in January, 1965, beginning a phase-out of piston-engine aircraft.

County Taxpayers Get $6 Million Tax Reduction

How much more money will residents of El Paso County have in their pockets this year, thanks to the reduction in taxes? To what extent will the local economy move ahead, as a result?

Some people will benefit more than others. In general, there will be bigger cuts in the tax rates for those with large incomes than for those in the lower brackets.

However, the tax cuts granted to those with moderate to low incomes will be very effective as they will be coupled with a new "minimum standard deduction" of $400 for husband and wife.

In El Paso County, the average saving this year will be approximately $136 per family, it is estimated. This is based on gross earnings, before payment of taxes, which averaged $8,240 per household locally last year.

For a married couple with two children, with an income equal to the local average, the new Federal tax will be $947, following the cut of $136.

In the case of a family with two dependents and with gross earnings of $10,000, the tax will be $1,280, which is $165 below the present amount.

For those in the $4,000-a-year class, the new tax will be $220. That is $68 less than before.

The total amount that will be saved in El Paso County during the first year, based on the way income is distributed locally, will be approximately $6,672,000.

This money, the Government hopes, will quickly find its way to the market place and give business an extra push forward.

Consumer buying would increase, moving merchandise off retail store shelves. That, in turn, would mean that stores would have to place new orders with wholesalers, who would pass them on to factories.

Thus, the Government feels, the added money put into circulation because of the tax cut will build up on itself, producing a cumulative effect several times as large as the original amount.

Nationally, it looks for more job opportunities to be created and for the high unemployment rate to be reduced.

The first concrete evidence of the tax cut will be visible in El Paso County in a short while. Paychecks will reflect a withholding rate of 14 per cent instead of 18 per cent.

Sundown Gets New Manager

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Polhemus have taken over the managership of the Sundown Lounge, 10 Old Man's Trail, Manitou Springs.

Polhemus was recently elected president of the Red Horse Corp., which owns the lounge, and as head of the corporation also became manager of the firm. His wife, Helga, is secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

Polhemus is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Polhemus, residents of Colorado Springs for about 50 years. Since 1946 John Polhemus has held various overseas civilian jobs and only a year ago he and his wife returned from a four-year tour of duty with an Air Force Maintenance contractor in Turkey.

John Polhemus has been an accountant and bookkeeper for most of his life, except for a time when he was assistant manager of the Terminal Restaurant and Hotel at Keflavik, Iceland, now the site of a NATO air-radar base.

Helga Polhemus is a native of Germany where she acquired 10 years of experience as a printer.

One of the new features of the Sundown Lounge will be a German menu. The food will be prepared exactly as it would be in Germany, rather than being Americanized. Polhemus plans to carry the German menu thruout the tourist season.

The lounge has a large ballroom and dance floor and features a combo and floor shows on Friday and Saturday nights. Entertainment on week days consists of organ music. The lounge can seat about 200 diners.

Chiropractors Discuss Body-Brain Relation

By the Society of Colorado Chiropractors

When a man's brain becomes isolated from a part of his body, his health will tend to fail — and this sometimes happens.

The nerve cells in the brain serve each one of the millions and millions of cells of which we are made," according to Dr. Roy Babcock, president of the Colorado Chiropractic Society.

The Denver doctor explained that this is why vital organs sometimes break down for no apparent reason — communication with the brain is cut off when nerves are pinched somewhere between.

This is the mission of the doctor of chiropractic, to make sure the bones in the spinal column are straight. It is along the protective center of these bones that the nerves carry the messages from he brain, telling the heart when to beat or build new cells, the liver when to excrete bile, directing the increase of white corpuscles to fight bacteria which doesn't belong in the body.

What happens if a bone in the back or neck is twisted out of place thru a whiplash or other injury?

It takes only slight misallignment to pinch off one or more of the thousands upon thousands of nerve messages which travel along the back bone with the speed of light. The chiropractor can detect, thru X-Ray and other scientific methods, back trouble which spells out illness for the patient.

"The body is a wonderful creation, but it cannot function without being told when and how — by the brain." And if a vital organ loses partial nerve contact, it is open to disease attack, or it can fail altogether.

"Look at it this way," Dr. Babcock said. "If one of the lungs becomes partly separated from the brain, with only a portion of the nerve messages reaching it, how can there be prompt protective action when germs or bacteria infest and threaten it?"

"The same is true of the joints of the legs and hands, the skin, the glands.

"Your chiropractor is the one doctor who is specifically trained to keep the nerve connection between body and brain effective and healthy," Dr. Babcock said.

The graduating doctor of chiropractic has a minimum of 4,000 actual hours of specialized university training.

Request to Drop Air Stop to Be Discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frontier Airlines' request to drop Pueblo from its east-west route between Denver and Grand Junction will be taken up at a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing May 19 in Denver.

The board scheduled the hearing originally to study the need of a stop at Steamboat Springs-Hayden-Craig on the lines' Denver-to-Salt Lake City route, and to decide whether to renew Frontier's authority to serve Gunnison on its Denver-to-Grand Junction route.

Frontier asked on Feb. 13 that the Pueblo question also be placed on the agenda. Pueblo opposed the request.

Representatives of the airline told Examiner Ross I. Newmann at a prehearing conference on Feb. 18 that the Denver-to-Gunnison route is 100 miles longer with the stop at Pueblo. It takes 1½ hours, compared to 47 minutes on the direct route, they said.

The stop at Pueblo was scheduled when the line was using DC3's, Frontier spokesmen said. With the current Convair planes, the line can provide direct service to Gunnison from Denver.

The hearing will not concern Frontier's stop at Pueblo on its route from Omaha to Denver to El Paso.

Public Figures Record Voices; Talk About JFK

By JOSEPH E. MOHBALT

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unique adventure in the chronicling of history began this weekend as Robert F. Kennedy became the first of 500 public figures — relatives, friends and foes—to record in his own voice the years and crisis of the late President John F. Kennedy.

It is hoped—although planners of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library aren't even discussing it yet — that Soviet Premier Khrushchev will take part in the project.

The attorney general talked long into the night and continued today, recording his memories of his assassinated brother. Helping him,by acting as an interviewer, was author and former Ambassador John Bartlow Martin.

In the end the tape-recorded interviews — some of which will be filmed—will be deposited in the Kennedy Library to be built on the banks of Boston's Charles River.

Some of them—for reasons of national security or to avoid embarrassment where personalities are discussed—may not be made public during the lifetimes of the persons involved.

The interviews will be conducted in four phases.

In the first round, which got under way after a luncheon for the interviewers Friday, about 200 officials—from the Cabinet, Congress, White House and judiciary—will be interviewed.

In the second phase, such family members as the late president's widow and mother will record their memories of Kennedy. So will such political allies as Mayors Robert F. Wagner and Richard J. Daley of New York and Chicago, Gov. Pat Brown of California, and old Massachusetts cronies.

Roger F. Blough, board chairman of U.S. Steel, who clashed with Kennedy over steel prices in 1962, will participate, as will a political foe, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The third round remains in the planning stage. But it promises interviews with international figures whose destinies touched Kennedy's. No agreements have been reached yet, but it's hoped such leaders as Khrushchev, French President Charles de Gaulle, Prime Minister Nehru of India, former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain and Indonesia's President Sukarno will participate.

The final phase of interviews will bring together panels of figures to go over outstanding events in Kennedy's career, such as the unsuccessful Cuban Bay of Pigs invasion and the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

Stock Market Tops Record Dow Jones Highs

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market made history this week as the Dow Jones averages reached new milestones "confirmed" by the rail component of the Dow which finally surpassed the 1929 peak.

Warmed by enactment of the long-anticipated $11.5-billion tax cut, the stock market carried through its fourth straight weekly rise.

It finished the month of February—historically treacherous—with a substantial gain instead of a loss as many had expected.

The topping of the 800 level in the Dow industrials was expected to draw many of the public back into the market and lead to a continued advance, possibly to the 825-to-850 level, according to Wall Street theorists.

The theorists have frequently been wrong, but it seemed this week that the market action was its own recommendation.

On the final trading day, when the Dow industrials completed a week's rise of 3.5 to close at 800.14, many low-priced issues were heavily traded. Several of these stocks were rails.

Analysts differed as to what this might mean. Some said it was dangerous evidence of "frothy" action, frequently a warning signal of an imminent market decline. Others hailed it as a sign of greater participation by the small investor, the "public."

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week rose 2.4 to a record 298.0. For February, the AP average rose 7.4.

The action during the past week and throughout the month was generally cautious and irregular, with interest rotating from one group to another. At no time was there a broad and strong movement either higher or lower.

Volume during the past week was 26,444,910 shares compared with 18,454,510 for the four-day trading week previous, shortend by the Washington's Birthday observance.

Economic news remained good. Steel demand was picking up more steam. Steel produ tion rose for the eighth straight week. Signing of the tax-cut bill seemed to offer prospects of more money for the consumer and the small investor, and higher profits for business.

A bullish omen for the market occurred Tuesday when the Dow Jones rail average rose to 189.13, topping the previous historic closing high of 189.11 reached Sept. 3, 1929. The rail average finished the week at $90.74, a gain of 3.91.

Of 1,519 issues traded this week, 780 advanced and 587 declined.

He also did not pay his $7 bill for the night.

A description of the man and his car has been circulated and a pickup is out for him.

TWIN AT GULFSTREAM

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Gulfstream Park's annual thoroughbred racing session may set new attendance records this spring. The meeting between March 4 and April 23 will see the twin double form of wagering added.

Gulfstream races are at the tailend of the tourist season and the "twin" has been used to increase wagering at many tracks. Gulfstream's "twin" will be on the fifth, sixth, eighth and ninth races daily. In the twin double the successful ones must pick four winners to collect.

Lawmakers Give Okay to More Cigarette Tax

By STEPHEN M. AUG

DENVER (AP) — Charges of irresponsibility were hurled across the floor of the Colorado House by Democrats and Republicans Friday before the lawmakers gave final approval to a three-cent state tax on every pack of cigarettes.

The measure was passed 38-25 with three Republicans joining Democrats in opposing it. The tax will cost Colorado cigarette smokers about $6 million a year.

Joining the Democrats on the House vote were Reps. William L. Armstrong of Aurora, Reg Howard of Boulder and William E. Myrick of Englewood.

The political battle started when Rep. Vincent Massari, D-Pueblo, said the people — including many Democrats — had been deceived by Republican promises to cut taxes.

Massari said that several years ago he joined Republicans in opposing tax increases request by Democratic Gov. Steve McNichols. McNichols "never promised the people. . . that he could run the state efficiently and reduce taxes," Massari said.

As a result "an unknown political figure was elected governor under the promise to cut taxes and give. . . Colorado an economic and efficient government," Massari said.

He noted that last year income taxes were cut and were made retroactive to the previous year. "This made many people believe that an era of good government with lower taxes had arrived," Massari added.

But he said that since the tax cut Republicans have provided college tuition increases, and income tax increase and now the cigarette tax.

"The governor," said Massari, "asked a cushion of about $1 million, but our very generous Republican friends in this hall give him close to $6 million."

An angry Rep. Ruth Clark, R-Fort Collins, told Massari "that speech would have been funny if it had come from anybody but you.

"Many Republicans stood up to see that you got your appropriation this year. . . and then for you to come before this microphone and castigate us . . . is beyond me."

Mrs. Clark noted that the Republican - dominated legislature had converted Pueblo College into the four-year Southern Colorado State College and provided funds for the new institution. This, she added, despite the fact that no Republican legislator has ever been elected from Pueblo in recent zears.

Rep. Frank Evans, D-Pueblo, said that the real issue was "a matter of funding state services . . . and the services we decided to buy cannot be done without raising taxes."

Evans said that before the GOP tax cut the state had a credit of $8 million. Had taxes not been reduced in the first place, Evans said, "we would have been able to keep more faith (with the people) than we are now."

A Republican member of the Joint Budget Committee, Rep. M. R. Douglass of Grand Junction, said that the state's current unhappy financial situation was due to economic conditions beyond anybody's control. He cited last year's dought which tumbled cattle prices and damaged the wheat crop.

Douglas said despite an $8 million loss in revenue the Republicans have provided Southern Colorado State College with funds to the fullest.

Form 1040–ES (Supplement) NEW RATES AND PROVISIONS FOR ESTIMATING TAX UNDER THE REVENUE ACT OF 1964

U.S. Treasury Department

THESE CHANGES ARE NOT APPLICABLE TO YOUR 1963 CALENDAR YEAR RETURN

This publication is designed to assist taxpayers in estimating income tax for 1964 in accordance with the reduced rates and other changes made by the Revenue Act of 1964. Form 1040–ES, previously distributed, should be completed by using the reduced rates and the changes of the new Revenue Act.

SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL CHANGES

1. Dividends credit and exclusion.—The 4 percent dividends received credit is reduced to 2 percent for dividends received in 1964, and is repealed for subsequent years. The $50 dividend exclusion is increased to $100 for 1964 and subsequent years.

2. Investment credit.—You are no longer required to reduce the basis of property which qualifies for the investment credit by the amount of the credit. The basis of any such property which was reduced in a prior year should be increased as of the first day of the year beginning in 1964 by the amount of the reduction required in a prior year.

3. Sick pay exclusion.—To figure your sick pay exclusion you must first determine whether your "sick pay" is: (1) more than 75 percent of your weekly rate of pay; or (2) 75 percent or less of your weekly rate of pay.

(1) Over 75 percent—

If you receive more than 75 percent of your weekly rate of wages for periods of absense from work because of illness or injury, there is now a 30-calendar day waiting period before you qualify for the exclusion. The amount to be excluded is limited to a rate not to exceed $100 a week.

(2) 75 percent or less—

If you receive 75 percent or less of your weekly rate of wages, the waiting period is 7 calendar days, but the exclusion is limited to a rate not to exceed $75 a week. The waiting period does not apply if you were hospitalized at least one day during your absence. After 30 calendar days the weekly rate of exclusion is increased to an amount not to exceed $100.

The exclusion for periods of absence which began before January 1, 1964, is to be computed under the 1963 rules.

4. Sale of residence by taxpayers 65 years of age or over.—If you sold property for $20,000 or less on or after your 65th birthday which was owned and used by you as your principal residence for at least 5 of the last 8 years any gain on the sale need not be included in income. If the property was sold for more than $20,000 part of the gain must be taken into income.

5. Deduction of certain State and local taxes.—No deduction is allowed for automobile tags, drivers licenses, or for alcoholic beverage, tobacco and selective sales or excise taxes (such as those on admissions, room occupancy, etc.) even if they are separately stated or imposed on the purchaser.

6. Casualty loss deduction.—The deduction for personal casualty and theft losses is limited to the amount in excess of $100 for each loss.

7. Charitable contribution deduction.—An additional allowance of up to 10 percent may now be taken for contributions made to or for the use of one of the following types of organizations:

(a) Federal or local governmental organizations where the gift is made exclusively for public purposes, and

(b) A corporation, trust, or community chest, fund, or foundation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, if such organization normally receives a substantial part of its support (other than from its own efforts) from the general public or an organization referred to in (a) above.

8. Medical expense deduction.—The 1 percent limitation on medicine and drugs no longer applies to the taxpayer and his wife (husband) if either is age 65 or over; or to the father or mother of the taxpayer or his wife (husband) if the parent is 65 or over and is a dependent of the taxpayer.

9. Expense for care of children and other dependents.—The deduction for these expenses is now also available if incurred while your wife is institutionalized or incapacitated for 90 consecutive days, or a shorter period if terminated by death and for the care of children up to age 13 (formerly 12). If you have two or more dependents, the limitation for deductions has been raised from $600 to $900.

The $4,500 limitation on income in the case of working wives has been raised to $6,000 and extended to include husbands whose wives are incapacitated. This limitation, however, does not apply to any period the wife is institutionalized for 90 consecutive days or a shorter period if terminated by her death.

10. Moving expense deduction.—Generally, employees including new employees, can deduct, in arriving at income on line 1 of the Tax Computation Schedule on page 2 of Form 1040–ES, unreimbursed moving expenses (transportation of your household goods, and members of the household, and their meals and lodging while in transit). The deduction is allowed only if the taxpayer's new place of work (a) is at least 20 miles farther from his former residence than was his former place of work, or (b), if he had no former principal place of work, is at least 20 miles from his former residence.

11. Interest on loans on certain insurance and annuity contracts.—Generally, if you pay interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to pay premiums on life insurance contracts, endowment contracts, or an annuity and you are following a plan of systematically borrowing amounts equal to the increase in the cash value of the insurance contract to pay part or all of the premiums, then that interest is not deductible.

12. Interest on certain deferred payments.—Generally, if you sell property for an amount in excess of $3,000 on the installment basis and part or all of the payments are due more than 1 year after the date of the sale or exchange—if no interest payments are specified or if "too low" interest payments are specified then part of each payment due after 6 months is to be treated as interest rather than as part of the sales price.

13. Retirement income credit.—

(a) Change in rate: The rate to be used in computing the credit has been reduced from 20 to 17 percent for 1964.

(b) Special rule: The maximum amount of retirement income to be used in figuring the credit for retirement income has been increased from $1,524 to $2,286 for taxpayers who file joint returns (both 65 years of age or over) but are presently limited to $1,524 because either the husband or wife did not have earned income in excess of $600 in each of any 10 prior calendar years.

In such cases the retirement income credit may be estimated by substituting $2,286 for $1,524 on line 2, Part VIII, Schedule B, Form 1040, and by making the joint computation in either column A or B of the schedule.

14. Standard deduction.—You may now elect to use the 10-percent standard deduction, as before, or the new minimum standard deduction. However, if your wife or husband elects the minimum standard deduction then you also must use it. The minimum standard deduction is computed as follows: $200 ($100 if married and filing separate returns) plus $100 for each exemption claimed on Schedule A of your return, including exemptions for age and blindness. The deduction is limited to $1,000 ($500 if married and filing a separate return). Consideration should be given to this provision in determining the amount to be entered on line 2 of the Tax Computation Schedule on page 2 of Form 1040–ES.

NOTE: Some of these changes are not applicable in the case of fiscal year taxpayers. Consult your District Director for full details.

Elderly Rancher Killed; Grazing Dispute Blamed

POWDER WASH, Colo. (AP) — An elderly rancher was shot to death and a veterinarian was wounded three times with a shot gun Friday after the two apparently had argued over grazing rights.

Joe M. Gutierrez was killed with a .30 caliber rifle bullet fired through the heart at close range, according to the Moffat County coroner, Dr. E. P. Monahan. The coroner said Gutierrez was either 70 or 80—"We think he was 80."

The wounded man, Wright Dickinson, about 34, was taken to a hospital at Rock Springs, Wyo., by his wife, who witnessed the shooting. The Dickinsons' two small children also saw the shooting, Dr. Monahan said.

The coroner said Dickinson, a veterinarian, apparently went to the Gutierrez ranch about 10 miles west of Powder Wasn in extreme northwestern Colorado.

Dickinson was wounded with a 20-gauge shotgun. His wife is believed to have helped him into their car for the trip to the hospital, the coroner said.

"We think that Gutierrez shot himself then with a rifle," Dr. Monahan said.

He said Dickinson was "doing fairly well" in the hospital. Neither the wounded man nor his wife had talked with officers Saturday night.

The coroner said he understood Dickinson had been asked by the Bureau of Land Management to move some of Gutierrez's cattle onto the rancher's allotment. There had been some talk about fencing the range, and "Gutierrez has been kind of hostile, I'm told," the coroner said.

An inquest will probably not be held before Monday, Dr. Monahan said.

The first airplane flight of the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk, N.C., lasted only 12 seconds and the plane traveled 120 feet.

Developments in Laos Dangerous, Military Men Say

By MALCOLM BARR

HONOLULU (AP) — The top brass in the U.S. Pacific command talk a lot about the Communist threat in Viet Nam. Actually, they are more worried now about developments in neighboring Laos.

In the strategy rooms in Hawaii, home of the U.S. military command for the Pacific and Far East, there is increasing concern over the continued gains of the Pathet Lao—the Laotian Communists—at the expense of the small Indochinese nation's right-wing and neutral factions.

U.S. military men accuse the Pathet Lao, aided by Communist North Viet Nam, of daily violations of the 1961 Geneva agreement which paved the way for a coalition government and guaranteed Laotian neutrality.

These Pathet Lao military gains have given the Communists control of important routes leading into Viet Nam. Thus the North Vietnamese Reds have ready supply lines to their guerrilla units in South Viet Nam.

Laos, however, is just one of the headaches for Adm. U. S. Grant Sharp when he becomes U. S. Pacific military commander this spring. Sharp, commander in chief of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, was officially named Friday as successor to Adm. Harry D. Felt, retiring as Pacific commander.

While Laos momentarily heads the list, Sharp will have to wrestle with Viet Nam and other possible trouble spots in his huge command.

In Viet Nam U. S. military men have found evidence in the new government's activities to give them some confidence.

Common Market May Buy U.S. Wheat in Future

DENVER (AP) — Nations in the European Common Market may in the future buy 2 million tons of U.S. wheat a year despite the fact they show signs of using lesswheat and of becoming wheat exporters themselves.

Persons attending the Colorado Wheat Meet were given that picture Friday by Theodore F. Fielder, director of the European office of Great Plains Wheat, Inc.

Fielder explained that the Common Market nations need hard, high-protein wheat such as ours for blending with their generally softer grain.

Europe as a whole might buy 5.5 million tons of our wheat annually if problems of currency, credit and shipping can be resolved in Eastern European countries, Fielder said.

Members of the Colorado Wheat Advisory Committee at the meeting elected an administrative committee Friday made up of J. W. C. Davis of Bennett, Wayne Orebaugh of Two Buttes, Clarence Woelk of Sheridan Lake, Arthur Wilks of Burlington, Donald Anderson of Genoa, Andrew Cross of Fort Morgan, Philip Ruch of Haxtun, Jim Funk of Hayden and Wayne Foster of Nunn.

Questions and Answers On Alcoholism

ON ACLOHOLISM

Editors Note: As a public service, The Gazette Telegraph will answer questions on Alcoholism and Problem drinking in our region. Send all inquiries to this newspaper. Answers will be supplied by G. L. McDougall, Director Alcoholism Information Center, Out West Building, sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism.

1. Q. Is Antabuse just another crutch for an Alcoholic? A. In discussing this point, it helps to point out that all medicine, (Insulin, Pencillin, Aspirin, etc) also could be considered crutches, that alcoholism is as much an illness as diabetes, pneumonia or appendicitis, and that they probably will be able to give up the Antabuse after a year or two of therapy.

2. Q. If the patient, in spite of therapy, gives up the Antabuse treatment and resumes drinking early in the program, can he return to his Antabuse treatment? A. Yes, usually in 6 to 8 hours after his last drink.

3. Q. What about the neurotic wife of the Alcoholic on Antabuse? A. Her neurosis may crisis of alcoholism in the family and best results are obtained if she, as well as he, gets some psychotherapy. For the wife to know that her husband is on Antabuse may give her the needed assurance that he is seriously working on his problem, and the consequent peace of mind will make her more amenable to therapy for herself. The Alanon Family Group is of great help to families of alcoholics.

4. Q. Why and What therapy is needed along with the Antabuse treatment? A. Therapy should be total, directed at the alcoholic's pyhsical state as well as his emotional and spiritual state. Alcoholism has been called a philosophy of life, and for this negative and destriuctive philosophy, a positive one must be acquired and maintained for permanant sobriety to be possible. — Through Alcoholics Anonymous, group therapy, individual counselling, psychoanalysis, or ideally all combined, such a result can be expected in from 50 to 75 percent of the patients.

5. Q. How efficacious is Antabuse? A. As with any method of treating alcoholism, the results depend on the measure of the individuals will to get well. Antabuse alone can cure few, if any, cases of alcoholism; taken in conjunction with psychotherapy, it can be of very real use.

6. Q. From what sources do Antabuse patients come? A. Patients come from a number of sources. . voluntary and involuntary. Involuntary patients are those committed by the court to the hospital and therefore to the program. Patients that have gotten into difficulty with the law because of criminal activities, i.e. bad-check writing, (along with the alcohol problem), have had the Antabuse program made a portion of their probationary agreements. Other are in varying degrees of voluntary and involuntary status: some coming alone because they have heard of the program, others coerced by family and friends or referred by Alcoholic's Anonymous, the local Council on Alcoholism, their employer or commanding officer.

7. Q. Does Alcoholic's Anonymous and the Antabuse program work hand in hand? A. Although taking no official stand in regard to Antabuse, some A. A. members in the United States are opposed to it on the grounds that it does nothing to promote the personality change so necessary for alcoholics to undergo. This is quite true, but we must not lose sight of the fact that many alcoholics at the onset of their treatment vehemently reject Alcoholics Anonymous, only to embrace it gladly after some psycotherapy. Others, although attending A.A. are unable to overcome the urge to drink and slip back so frequently into drinking that they get discouraged and drop out. Antabuse in many cases has tidied patients over the first few shaky weeks and months, while they are "getting the program." Some A. A. members refer patients to Antabuse, realizing that the two forms of therapy are not mutually exclusive.

8. Q. Why do some Alcoholic's reject both A.A. and Antabuse? A. Some alcoholics will reject both, stating that their main problem is not alcoholism, but some underlying emotional disturbance. This is also quite true in most cases, but in order to make any progress with these must maintain sobriety. Actually there is by now a double problem — the Personality maladjustment which lead the individual into compulsive drinkproblems engendered by and resulting from alcoholism. These problems are very real and may enter every phase of the person's life — his personal feelings about himself, his relationship to his wife and children, his abiltiy to earn a living, and his cultural and social life. No therapy directed at the root causes alone which disregards the control of drinking itself will be effective. One needs sobriety to obtain and utilize the insights which can be acquired through therapy.

Demonstration To Be Resumed In Princess Anne

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. (AP) — Negro students say street demonstrations in protest of two segregated Princess Anne restaurants will resume Tuesday unless current negotiations produce satisfactory results.

The students announced Friday night — after four hours of negotiating with town and state officials — that demonstrations had been postponed three days.

Curtis Gentry, one of the student leaders at nearby Maryland State College, a predominantly Negro school, told a mass meeting at a Negro church that state officials had promised to arrange a meeting with integrationists and the Somerset County legislative delegation.

Several negotiators said such a meeting would deal with the inclusion of Somerset County, of which Princess Anne is the county seat, in the Maryland Public Accommodations Law.

However, in Annapolis this possibility seemed remote as a bill to extend the law to the 12 counties now exempt from it was rejected Friday night by the House Judiciary Committee.

Heavy Guards Reported at Saigon Building

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — A heavy guard stood outisde the U.S. armed forces commissary and post exchange today following a report Communist terrorists planned to blow up the building.

U.S. military police also fanned out through Saigon checking whether Vietnamese police sentries assigned to protecting Americans were on their posts.

The tightened security measures have been in force since the Viet Cong bombing of a U.S. movie theater Feb. 16 killing three Americans.

Communist propagandists have been distributing leaflets during the past week calling for new violence against the American community in the capital. U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge also has received death threats and now is accompanied by a heavy guard, informants said Friday.

American women and children usually cram the commissary's supermarket on Saturday for their weekend shopping. Security officials regarded the building as a prime target for Communist terrorists.

The traffic in front of the building was allowed to move only one way to permit stricter control.

Civil Rights Fight Results In Arrests

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) Fighting erupted in a civil rights demonstration in front of city hall in this university city of 76,340 Friday. It resulted in the arrest of 13, both Negroes and whites.

Pickets, marching in a tight circle, were protesting what they said was police brutality in the arrest of six Negro youths two weeks ago. Police, who flatly deny the accusation, have headquarters in City Hall.

The demonstrators represented the direct action committee, a belligerant Ann Arbor group publicly denounced in the past for alleged advocacy of violence by both the NAACP and the Congress of Racial Equality.

Three policemen were hurt in the brawling that started on a lawn and ended on the floor of the City Hall lobby. Of the 13 held, three said they were University of Michigan coeds. A woman schoolteacher and five juveniles also were among those arrested.

Woman Trial Attorney Hit In Sinatra Case

By DORIS KLEIN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Part of the suspense at the Frank Sinatra Jr. kidnaping trial has nothing to do with the innocence or guilt of the three defendants. It arises from wonder over what in the world Gladys Towles Root will wear next.

Mrs. Root, even if you ignore her plunging necklines and skyscraper hats, no easy task, is at 58 an impressive woman—tall, buxom, actressy.

Put her in a skin-hugging leopard fabric dress with a red fox hat atop a platinum topknot, the fox's head staring forth blankly at the tippytop, and you have, well . . . Gladys Towles Root as she appeared Thursday.

Each day of the three-week trial she has appeared in a different costume, each deserving the adjective that fits her like an elbow-length shocking pink glove: flamboyant. She says she has 100 or more at home.

She conceded one day, while decked in a black outfit topped by a four-foot-high hat of white fox: "I missed my calling. I should have joined a circus."

But beneath the fur and feathers, silks and satins, is the cool head of a veteran trial attorney.

In the Sinatra case she represents defendant John Irwin. She set the tone for the entire defense by contending it was a hoax. Her opening statement, delivered in tones reminiscent of those of actress Carol Channing, went: "This kidnaping, if it was a kidnaping—This victim, if there was a victim . . ."

In 33 years, the Sinatra case probably is Mrs. Root's most noted.

With an income estimated at over $100,000 a year, Mrs. Root works 14 hours a day, sometimes in her velvet-walled office and, mornings, in a pearl-encrusted bed in her 14-room home.

Born on a wheat farm near what is now downtown Los Angeles, she is one of two daughters of a successful businessman.

A a child, she preferred show business. But during an amateur performance, a self-knitted dress unraveled as she stepped from a pool of water. Another time, a dress of apricot leaves fell apart. Gladys huddled under the leaves until the curtain fell.

Twice married, mother of two, she has been single since the death of her second husband. She designs her own clothes — "even my underwear matches." Before becoming a platinum blonde she tinted her hair with cake coloring — blue, violet, orange — to match the next day's outfit.

She says she spends $25,000 a year on clothing, but explains: "I don't smoke or drink. Clothes are my only vice. My clients like my taste. I dress to please them. I wear their favorite color to cheer them up."

Two Teenagers Are Held in Slaying Father

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — State police held two teen-age boys today in the slaying of a high school senior and began a search for the body of the father of one of them.

Richard McAlister, 18, of Norwalk and Edward McNally, 17, of Wilton were charged Friday with first-degree murder.

State Police Commissioner Leo J. Mulcahy said the youths admitted killing John R. Shinners, 18, of Wilton Sunday and Edwin McAlister, Richard's father, last Aug. 29.

Mulcahy said the youths buried the father's body in an undisclosed wooded area.

Young McAlister "hated his father with a fixation" and blamed him for the death of his mother, said Lt. Louis Marchese, commander of State Police in this section of Connecticut.

Marchese said McNally and McAlister ambushed McAlister's father at his home, McNally shooting him and young McAlister stabbing him.

The youths became apprehensive recently about a police investigation into the disappearance of the father and decided to escape, State Police said.

On Sunday McNally called Shinners, with whom he was acquainted, and asked him to meet them, State Police said.

The body of Shinners, who had been shot six times, was found later that day in a wooded area of Wilton, a few miles north of Norwalk. His car turned up the next day in Westport.

Apparently, police said, the two youths wanted possession of Shinners' car.

Government Has Distorted the Market

Marxian fallacies about property and property ownership are at the root of a most serious event which has occurred in San Francisco. A group of tenants have "seized" an apartment building belonging to an "absentee owner." They are demanding that they be permitted to occupy the building because they "need" housing and because housing should be available to all on the basis of "need."

We have already taken up some of the points raised in their letter. See preceding editorials published yesterday and the day before.

Now we continue with other points raised:

REMAINING ON PROPERTY BELONGING TO ANOTHER AFTER YOU HAVE BEEN ORDERED TO LEAVE IS NOT WRONG.

If not, then privacy and decency have been banished forever. All that the strikers are claiming here is that a trespasser has more rights than the person trespassed against. They fancy they are calling for a system of equal rights. They are actually calling for an abandonment of all rights by all persons.

THERE IS PRESUMABLY A "GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT" TO RENT ONLY UNITS ON WHICH A LARGE PROFIT CAN BE MADE.

We strongly suspect that there is no such agreement, gentlemanly or otherwise.

If there is a free market in rentals in San Francisco, a point with which we are unfamiliar, then each owner of rental property would try to rent everything he had available at a competitive price. He could not afford to keep vacancies. His overhead goes on all the time. He could not afford to rent at a high price for people would not pay it. He would try to rent at a competitive price for this way he would be providing about what others provide at a cost most people could and would be willing to pay.

If there is not a free rental market in San Francisco, it is because government has already intervened. That would mean that rents on some units had been "frozen" at so low a figure that the owner would lose money if he rented at that figure. From various statements in the letter, it is possible to conclude that this has happened. If it is, then the plight of the tenants is traceable, not to the desire on the part of the owner to make large profits, which is what is claimed, but to action on the part of government that is forcing the owner of property out of business.

If the latter is the case, then the owner of the building is in process of getting rid of all his tenants so that he can tear down the building and put up something else. The "strikers" say he has no right to do this because THEY have a "need" for what he has. But what of the other people who will "need" the other facility that he might provide? Is the "need" of one person or one group to be considered as more important than the "need" of another person or group? What fairness would exist in such an arrangement?

SOME PEOPLE HAVE NO MONEY AT ALL FOR RENT, BUT NONETHELESS, THEY ARE ENTITLED TO HOUSING.

Why? If some people have no money for food, are they entitled to food? Clothing? Books? TV? Automobiles? If so, then those who have these things must provide for others who do not produce at their own cost.

This is a refinement of the old idea that "the world owes everyone a living." Does it? To provide a living for anyone, work must be performed. Those who work are entitled to what they produce. Those who do no work and who, in consequence, have no money at all, are entitled to nothing. What a travesty to suppose that the non-producers should be rewarded at the expense of the producers.

But this is the essence of Marx, who thought he was going to outlaw poverty by robbing the rich to give to the poor. This is what Robin Hood thought, also. And it is what every thief likes to believe.

ST. DAVID

To the Editor:

Sunday, March 1, is St. David's Day. St. David, patron saint of Wales, was a bishop famed for his love of God and country.

In the early Sixth Century a heathen army from England invaded Wales dressed in Roman armor which was as common then as American war surplus today. A problem of identifying friend from foe arose which St. David solved by having the Welsh wear leeks in their helmets. This is the origin of the custom of wearing leeks on St. David's Day.

In modern day America we need something like the leek of St. David. Traitors often disguise their sentiments as "enlightened patriotism" as they conduct a witchhunt against those they mislabel "right-wing

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 452: "How can a reduced tax that leaves more money in the hands of the consumers improve the welfare of mankind?"

Answer: The reason that it will improve the welfare of mankind is that it leaves the individual more nearly responsible for his own acts. It makes him more independent of the government. He has to depend more on his own initiative. He has to use his mind and look ahead to see the results of different acts, whether in the long run it is harmful or helpful.

If the man needs the money for his family for current consumption, it improves his own well-being. If he reinvests his capital into tools this helps everyone because he has to bid against other tool owners to get help and this raises wages. He also has to compete with other producers in order to sell his product, and this reduces prices.

The government never creates any wealth. It is a pauper and only gets its wealth by legalized power. The most harmful part of legalized power is grabbing the youth of the land and indoctrinating them to believe that the majority has a right to do things that no individual has a right to do.

Certainly, leaving more money in the hands of the producer benefits everyone. In fact, the producer should have all that he produces and the government should be supported on a voluntary basis rather than by the might of power.

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

Under Fire

Self-control is never difficult when pressures are lacking. But the truly moral man is he who can refrain from invoking aggressive action against others even in the face of what he takes to be provocation.

The Strike Is Settled

NO LANDLORD HAS A RIGHT TO REFUSE TO RENT HIS PROPERTY.

This is to say that the would-be tenant has a greater right to occupy a property than the person who owns it. From whence does that right arise? To assume the existence of such a right is to assume a right of trespass and a non-right to hold what is properly one's own.

The answer to dealing with a person who does not want to rent you what he owns is to provide for yourself in some other way. If you are unwilling or unable to provide for yourself, why is someone else obligated to you? This is to contend that some men are slaves to other men. Those who have property are the slaves of those who have no property but want property.

NO LANDLORD HAS A RIGHT TO REFUSE TO FURNISH HIS PROPERTY TO ANOTHER EVEN IF THE OTHER DOES NOT PAY RENT.

The answer to this point is even more forceful than the foregoing. The "strikers" in this case are insisting the landlord has no rights at all, but that they have a right to what the landlord owns and at no cost to themselves. This is arrant knavery. It is an attempt to justify and elevate grand theft to a way of life.

NO LANDLORD HAS A RIGHT TO REFUSE TO PROVIDE WATER, GAS, ELECTRICITY AND PHONE SERVICE AT HIS OWN COST, SO THAT HIS TENANTS, EVEN THO THEY HAVE FORCED THEMSELVES UPON HIM, ARE PROVIDED WITH THESE BASIC NECESSITIES.

This concept calls for the strongest kind of condemnation. Not only is theft being justified, a condition is supposed to be created in which continuing theft is to occur. It would be difficult to suggest a more heinous and vicious situation. Yet many a strike has operated on much the same premise.

REPEATED NOTICE TO MOVE DOES NOT CONSTITUTE NOTICE THAT SERVICES WILL BE TERMINATED.

If a person's stay on another's property is unwelcome and notice of that fact is given, surely specific notification of of the next steps to be taken is not required.

THE LANDLORD - TENANT RELATIONSHIP IS 'SATANIC' AND MUST BE DESTROYED.

On the contrary, the landlord-tenant relationship is a true market-place relationship in which one man offers a service for sale that another man wants to buy. The relationship is highly respectable. It is true that government has endeavored to cast the landowner in a bad light. This was particularly true during World War II and is true now in all the racial demonstrations. In spite of this fact, persons having housing to rent provide a great and necessary service, and persons wishing to patronize landlords do so because it is to their advantage to do so. Were it not, they would provide their own housing in some manner that would be even more advantageous.

THOSE WHO OCCUPY PROPERTY THEY DO NOT OWN MAY RIGHTFULLY DEMAND FROM THE PROPER OWNER WHATEVER THEY REQUIRE SO THEY CAN MANAGE WHAT THEY HAVE SEIZED.

This is simply adding insult to injury. It is equivalent to the thief who steals a safe, returning to the owner the following day and demanding the combination because he hasn't been able to get it open.

ALL TENANTS OUGHT TO JOIN TOGETHER TO OUST ALL LANDLORDS.

Short-sighted foolishness. If more housing is what is required, and that seems to be at the bottom of the "strike" then to provide more housing, some encouragement must be given to landlords so they will build more units. Instead, if customers unite in striking against those who provide what they want, the final upshot will be no housing at all.

HOUSING SHOULD NOT BE OWNED BUT SHOULD BE CONSIDERED AS READILY AVAILABLE AS THE AIR WE BREATHE.

Nature provides air, but men who invest and labor provide housing. The two can never be compared. Housing not only should be owned by someone, it will be.

There is no possible way for housing to come into existence without it being owned. Ownership can exist in the hands of one person, a group of persons, a corporation, a tribe, a government. But non-ownership of something that is the product of production and is in market demand, simply will not occur.

To simplify we could say that apartment units will be owned either by: 1) The men who put up the money and produce them; 2) The men who do not put up the money and do not produce them, but who steal the units from those who do; or 3) The government, which does exactly what private persons could do, but does it under the mask of legality via taxation or legal confiscation of one sort or another.

We are happy to be able to conclude this brief series by citing a report which we received from the Associated Press. The "strikers" have been ousted and the building is being torn down in compliance with the owner's wishes.

The Case of the Shaking Secretary

From Wall Street Journal

The other day one of the young ladies in the office came to see us with shaking hand and quivering voice. She'd just received one of those letters from the Internal Revenue Service.

In blunt terms it suddenly announced that the IRS questioned her deductions to help support an 80-year-old aunt, and that if within 15 days exactly it did not receive documentary proof that the aunt actually existed and a detailed accounting of the aunt's total financial situation, the young lady's tax claim would be forthwith denied and she would be automatically assessed more taxes.

The day this little love note arrived was only a couple of days before the ultimatum date stamped on the form. Since the franked envelope bore no postmark, you couldn't tell whether the letter had kicked around the IRS office for a week or so before mailing or whether the delay was the fault of the other arm of the government, the Post Office. Luckily she wasn't on vacation.

In any event, there was hardly time left for breathing, which may explain why the young lady was breathing so hard. We breathed a little hard ourselves when she showed us the form the IRS wanted her to fill out, document and swear to at the risk of prosecution for perjury. The government demanded such detail as to challenge a CPA much less a youthful secretary just learning with what suspicion the government views anyone's compassion toward the old and sick.

In view of the short time left between demand and execution, we suggested the young lady call the local IRS office. That was a mistake. She got such short shrift over the phone that the fright was compounded. By this time it didn't do a bit of good to tell her that Mortimer Caplin is really a nice fellow.

We don't know how it's all going to end, since she's now out of the office trying to make her peace with those whose job it is to see that the rich and lordly don't gyp the government. We don't even know how the government, taxes being what they are, can avoid asking questions.

Still, we find it all just as disturbing as the young lady did. Be you rich or poor, can you be undisturbed if suspicion is to prejudge all and frightening letters browbeat with the arrogance of office?

To The Point

Those Boring Courses

By RUSSELL KIRK

You and I, gentle reader, have heard a great deal, these past two or three years, about college drop-outs, "under-achievement," and the like. Also we have read figures purporting to demonstrate that many young people don't enroll in college who would do as well as those already enrolled. (This last usually is an argument for more public appropriations for higher education.)

Well, candidly, it's true that some promising young people never set foot upon a college campus. But also a good many of those enrolled don't deserve the privileges of the higher learning; they spend their time in fun and games, and deservedly flunk out in their first year. If those outside are no better than about half the freshmen inside the ivied halls — why, we ought to be glad our campuses don't have an even bigger mob of indolent and ill-prepared college freshmen. Let's not subsidize more incompetence, to dishearten the overworked college professor!

Yet also there are really intelligent young men and women who never attend college simply because it offers little for their minds — or who drop out after one year, from sheer intellectual boredom. The following extract from a lively letter sent to me by a most literate freshman at one of the California state colleges may illustrate my point.

"At my state college, I am taking English, biology, psychology, and American history; and, because I am a philosophy major, I must take a dreary general-education course — Introduction to Philosophy. It is insipid fare at best. Latin cannot be arranged for second-semester registrations, and Greek is unheard of thruout the state college system. Not even French or German could be arranged. I am one of the group so distasteful to the educators — the 'underachievers.' I fear I easily revert to more interesting private endeavors if I dislike the assigned courses. The result, of course, is that my grades suffer — as do my chances of gaining entrance to a better school. Perhaps if I do poorly enough, I can qualify for a National Defense Education Act loan."

Just so. The infinitely boring mass-scale "survey" courses of freshman and sophomore years, intended to compensate for the sad deficiencies of most high schools, serve to convince a good many bright young men and women that college is a boondoggle. No wonder they're "underachievers!" There's little to achieve, when the whole curriculum is calculated to satisfy mediocrity.

Also the dismal impersonality of the mass-campus repels such students as were looking for a minor philosopher, at least, with whom to converse. The New York City colleges now are planning to increase enrollment by half in little more than a year — and seat as many as 1,500 students in one class lecture room! The student with intellectual inclinations may be better off at home with a book or two.

Allen-Scott Report

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — The most "sensitive" question confronting the special commission investigating President Kennedy's assassination is whether Lee Harvey Oswald was a double agent when he committed this murder.

On this sensationally significant enigma, the probers have directly conflicting testimony.

Both U.S. and Russian authorities have flatly denied the killer was in their employ. At the same time, the commission has indisputable information from intelligence and security agencies of the two countries that they were "in contact" with Oswald on various occasions in the four years prior to the Kennedy slaying.

The Oswald file the Soviet turned over to the State Department reveals that Russian Intelligence and security agents contacted Oswald a number of times between 1959 and 1962 — when he was living in the Soviet as an avowed "defector."

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, in an "affidavit," discloses that his agents made "three contacts" with Oswald after he returned to the U. S. All of them, Hoover explains, were wholly investigative. At no time was Oswald in the FBI's employ, nor was money given him.

Former Central Intelligence Director Allen Dulles, a member of the commission, has told the other six members that he has no knowledge of Oswald's acting as a CIA agent. John McCone, present head of CIA, has said the same thing.

State Department records show that Oswald had several meetings with the CIA representative in the U.S. embassy in Moscow. During this period, the assassin was seeking to renounce his citizenship. One State Department cable, No. 234, dated November 2, 1959, reports that Oswald was interviewed by the CIA and other embassy officials.

Mrs. Marina Oswald, 23-year-old widow of the killer, told the commission that Soviet security agents contacted her husband a number of times while they were living in Russia. Under questioning, she emphatically denied that she or Oswald had been KGB (secret police) agents or were "associated" with that organization. Mrs. Oswald confirmed that her uncle is a Soviet "military colonel" and that she and Oswald resided near him in Minsk.

One of the curious backstage aspects of the investigation is acute sensitiveness about information relating to that agency.

For example: At Dulles' vigorous insistence, certain questions and answers about Oswald's possible training as a secret agent while in Russia were put off the record; that is, they were not transcribed and are not recorded in the testimony.

Thruout the inquiry, Dulles has displayed a militant protectiveness regarding the CIA.

Other mysteries being explored by the commission are:

How Oswald was able to obtain a passport in New Orleans to go to Russia despite the fact that the State Department had a file detailing his "defection" in Moscow and four years' residence in the Soviet.

This passport, Do92526, was issued on June 25, 1963. In his application Oswald stated he proposed traveling from three to 12 months as a tourist to England, France, Germany, Holland, Finland, Italy, Poland and Russia.

Oswald's original passport, dated September 10, 1959, was numered 1733242.

His second passport was given him the day after he asked for it, and without the required "name check" for individuals known to be communist or to have communist associations. So far, the commission has no explanation for this official dereliction. Authorities of the Passport Division are to be questioned about that.

A senator has given the investigators the name of a Texas attorney who claims to have information about Oswald's being a double agent. The lawyer reputedly learned this from a client who has been operating in communist circles for a number of years.

Yuri Nossenko, the important Soviet security official who recently defected to the U.S., may be questioned by the commission.

In his position as a key member of the American section of KGB, Nossenko would have had access to files on Oswald. Whether he did is not known. Staff members of the commission are slated to confer with him to determine whether he testifies before the commission.

Lately, the commission's closed-door sessions have been sparsely attended.

Only one of the seven members was present during the interrogation of Oswald's brother. This member was former CIA Director Dulles, who balked at any testimony that might reflect on the intelligence agency.

A RED "HOT LINE"

Despite this country's ban against trade with Communist East Germany, the teletype at the U.S. end of the Moscow-to-Washington hot line came from that satellite. Installed in the Pentagon's communications center, the teletype's number is "T 51-A RFT Blattschreiber," and a stamped plate states it was made in Karl Marxstadt, East Germany. Defense officials say the machine was installed at the Soviet's request. . Saudi Arabia is buying 300 anti-tank missiles from Britain. This is the second purchase of this weapon by an Arab country. Kuwait bought a number of these guided missiles last year.

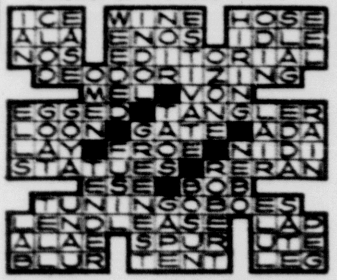
Answer to Previous Puzzle



And Yet Another Tomorrow

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, PhD

After finishing a column on the unpleasant subject of suicide, I realized I stopped too soon simply because the subject is unpleasant and there's more to suicide than is indicated by the number of successful and reported attempts. When more than 15 Californians out of every 100,000 manage to commit suicide every year, more than 100 attempts are recorded. For every 100 recorded attempts at suicide, probably from 5 to 10 times that many are not officially recorded. Beyond that are all the people who may have temporary impulses which are not strong enough to bring on an actual attempt to commit suicide. Obviously, I cannot prove that 10 per cent of the adult population of California occasionally feels the urge to commit suicide but I'm stuck with that figure, regardless.

Every year I receive more letters from people who write something like this: Don't you ever feel like just giving up and quitting? Or, what's the use of trying when it seems like everybody is only concerned with a fast buck or how to get something for nothing? And, there are others who rather violently condemn me because I refuse to give up and succumb to the get something for nothing urge, which I believe is akin to a suicidal impulse, stemming from an addiction to fatalism. There are even those unfortunates who suggest that if we want to be free, we can commit suicide, ourselves.

One of these days, when legislators have gone as deeply into our pockets as they dare, a few of them will probably be foolish enough to try to make suicide a criminal offense and you know what will happen then. There will be more suicides and fewer reported attempts. More people who attempt suicide will make darned sure they don't miss.

One of the statistics on suicide presents an inaccurate picture. While the State of Nevada shows a more than 15 per 100,000 population rate, the statistic does not reflect a true picture of suicidal tendencies among the citizens of the state.

A newspaper reporter who worked in Nevada informed me that the majority of the suicides in Nevada were out-of-state residents and I believe that further investigation will prove his statement to be quite accurate. There's no doubt but that a good many people journey to Nevada with stolen, borrowed or other money which does not belong to them in order to try to get well at the gambling tables, and even here we find giant government in the picture. Where else can a person attempt to make some financial gain without Mr. Whiskers hanging over his shoulder trying to get his cut first? Personally, I don't believe the chances of beating government to the money are very good even in the gambling halls unless the gambler limits his winnings to just a few dollars here and there.

England permits hope to live in the hearts of even the poorest thru government-owned and controlled pools and sweepstakes tickets which provide winners with a tax-free bounty, ostensibly. In this case, government takes its cut out of the pot first, but it makes the suckers feel better to know that what they win, they can keep.

While the suicide rate in the United States is much less than in many other countries, suicide still rates among the ten top killers in this country and as far as I am concerned that's a crying shame. Prior to 1932, the suicide rate in this country was among the lowest in the world. Even the years of the depression did not create a suicide rate equal to the average rate today.

As far as I am concerned, government intrusion into the private lives of the people is a major cause of a great deal of the depression and anger and frustration which drive too many people to commit suicide, and many people are sensitive to these factors even while they do not put words to them. Government has encouraged rampant apologism and self-abasement, and the best defense against government is to tell government to get off your back and get lost.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

In the Name of Economy

By WILLIS E. STONE

The federal government is giving some appearance of response to the idea of economy which is growing in the land. Unfortunately, it is only the name which has won favor as a "slogan."

To the average person the word "economy" means frugality, a reduction in spending, making both ends meet. But this is not true in the political mind which adopts the word as just one more "front" for new spending devices.

It is true that tremendous propaganda has been developed for a "tax cut," but it tends to conceal the more concentrated drive for increased spending and increased invasions of our private affairs. For example, the so-called "war on poverty" advocated by politicians, while sounding fine, threatens to impoverish everyone. There is no limit to the spending of tax dollars that can be lavished on this idea.

The "war on poverty" has, according to political decree, been going on now for more than thirty years. It has created more than a trillion dollars of new debts for us to pay, and enormously reduced the capacity of the American people to care for themselves. It makes one shudder to think of the devastation being planned for us by political decree in this next phase of the "war on poverty."

And the Executive branch of government, without reference to the Constitution or to the Congress, has granted to itself total power to seize everything in sight when it chooses. Make no mistake about it, the design for a total take-over is near completion. It has been attained by simply publishing a rule or order in the Federal Register JUST ONCE and it then is supposed to have the power of law.

Executive Order 10995 gives the "executive" the power to take over all communication media, thus terminating "freedom of the press."

Executive Order 10998 provides the "executive" with power to confiscate all food, farms and farm equipment, thus terminating the American concept of private property.

Executive Order 10997 gives the "executive" power to take over power sources, electric, petroleum, gas and mineral. Executive Order 10999 makes it possible to take over all modes of transportation.

Executive Order 11000 provides the "executive" with the capacity to take over the physical bodies of all people for a political work force, which is slavery as surely as anything the Pharaohs of Egypt ever planned. This is by no means the end of the plans for seizure under the pretense of law. However, total conquest of the American people can not be attained as long as we keep the Constitution working.

The surest way to restore the Constitution to full force and effect as the citadel of our liberties is to add the Liberty Amendment to it. The amendment is currently pending Congress as H. J. Res. 23 and has been formally approved by Wyoming, Texas, Nevada, Louisiana, Georgia and South Carolina. It provides that:

"Sec. 1. The government of the United States shall not engage in any business, professional, commercial, financial or industrial enterprise except as specified in the Constitution.

JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY

To the Editor:

There are those in positions of responsibility who have been entrusted with one of the most effective educational medias of the twentieth century — television.

This media can be used for good, or for evil. The choice is up to them. They can help shape the destiny of our peoples for growth and prosperity, or for the poverty of socialism.

The "brave new world" promises many things to those who have a hand in shaping it. But, alas, like all the other soap-bubble dreams, the promises are empty and the idea unrealistic.

Our nation was founded on Constitutional principles which limited the powers of our government. Sad to say, the federal government has overstepped these boundaries and has become larger and more powerful than the Constitution ever intended, or than is necessary for any size nation or world problem, or that is safe for any group of peoples.

It has been the intention of the John Birch Society to do what it could to alert those about them and our elected officials that our government was becoming dangerously and unnecessarily large. In the process we have found stepping on a few toes unavoidable. It is tragic that there are rascals in the legislative, judicial and executive departments of our federal government. We did not put them there. But we would be remiss in our responsibilities as American citizens if we did not do everything we could to expose them.

The John Birch Society represents one of the last bulwarks against an increasing bureaucracy and the dangers of socialism in our country. I believe that the television industry should give more careful attention to the treatment that they are giving to Robert Welch and the Society as a whole. Thoughtless and even underhanded tactics toward Robert Welch and the Society are not in the best of taste nor in keeping with their high calling and responsibility to the public in giving out the best for public consumption.

I think it would be well if the leading members of the television industry would read the following portion of Scripture, found in Acts 5:34-39:

"Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space; and said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men. For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain: and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought. After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed. And now I say unto you, refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought: but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."

If the leading members of the television industry do not feel disposed to help the John Birch Society in their efforts to promote sound Americanism, why do they not refrain from the thoughtless and unkind treatment that they have rendered to the Society? If God does not favor the Society's efforts, it will come to nought, without television's help.

FREEDOM LOSS

To the Editor:

Thank God we have a paper in our city that will stand up for our God-given freedom and liberty.

Was pleased to see an article in the Gazette February 22 from Dr. McIntire. He is a great speaker, knows what he is talking about. Christians should all get back of him and all other like him to preserve our freedom until the Holy Spirit is taken out. The Bible says it will withholdeth "that He might be revealed in His time." (II Thess., 2-6:7).

Dr. Carl McIntire on 20th Reform House is heard again on KFEL Pueblo every morning at 9:30 from Monday through Friday.

Clergymen, take time and tune in and warn your flock. You are held responsible for so few are doing it. We are in our last days. The Bible tells us when we see these things coming upon us, look up, our redemption draweth nigh.

MENTAL INSTITUTIONS

To the Editor:

According to a news item in the Gazette Telegraph February 19, a Mr. Victor B. Grandy, treasurer of Colorado's Mental Health Association, is calling for a letter-writing campaign, to exert pressure on the joint budget committee, to get more funds appropriated for the operation of our mental institutions. Does Mr. Grandy mean to intimate that Governor Love and his staff are dealing recklessly with this grave problem?

When members of CORE staged a sit-in just outside of the governor's office not so long ago, demanding action for more public housing or some such thing, Governor Love appropriately stated that government should be by law, not by coercion. Is there a mutual interest between CORE and the Mental Health Association?

I think I am correct in assuming that the Colorado Association for Mental Health is an arm of The National Association for Mental Health. The National and World Federation for Mental Health is master-minded by such people as Dr. Margaret Mead, a UNESCO anthropologist cited by the U. S. Senate Committee as having consorted with the self-confessed NKVD agent Mark Aborwoski, a Dr. Brock Chisholm who denies morality per se, and Bertrand Russell (to name a few), a world-renowned atheist, who says that the influence of the home is obstructive, indoctrination must begin before the age of ten to get the children to believe that snow is black.

Naturally, these people take credit for all the mental health laws on the books at state and national level.

Knowledgeable, humanitarian, and patriotic people such as Lewis Albert Alesen, M. D., and Dr. R. Swinburne Clymer tell us that these laws do not concern themselves so much with the plight of the stricken, but rather with those that stand in the way of their world-revolutionary endeavors; how they might lay their hands on them, commit them to confinement, subject them to drugging so that in the words of Lavrenti Beria, former head of the Soviet secret police, they will never again draw a sane breath.

Representative Oakley Wade, the honorable chairman of the joint budget committee: this then is my contribution to this letter-writing campaign that Mr. Grandy called for. I feel that the matter is being dealt with cautiously and conscientiously.

BIBLE READING

To the Editor:

In re Bible reading in the schools: The Constitution plainly states that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion. This is a denial of a power to makers of laws rather than a command to the people. The Supreme Court might better have said to the New York committee, "You have no authority to make such a law. Void it, do not try to enforce it, do not bother to repeal it, just void it."

The 10th Amendment says that powers not given to Congress or denied to the states shall be reserved to the states or to the people. The pastor of the little log church in the wood, of the little sod church on the prairie and of the little stone chapel by the sea can direct the spiritual and religious better than the composite bureaucracy can.

The neighborhood parents and the teacher of the little red schoolhouse can care for local education better than the National Education Association and UNESCO.

Relatives and neighbors volunteer to care for orphans, the feeble elderly, the sick and the maimed at 1 per cent of the expenditure made by Health, Education and Welfare.

Lowly peasants in their jeans understand the simple natural law better than the nine wise men in black can understand the incomprehensible, cumbersome, often contradictory, warehouseful mass of man - made laws. The time may be at hand when we should abolish the whole mass of artificial laws, fall back on the natural law, which, after all, is Common Sense; and establish a new government that shall be "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

It would be refreshing news if we should hear that the Supreme Court is opening each daily session with the reading of the Ten Commandments, the Ten Amendments, and the Golden Rule, with selections from the Bible and the Constitution of the United States.

DAN G. LeFEVRE

Editor's note: Reader LeFevre has omitted from his excellent letter the fact that government schools are all supported by tax money. Whether the school is a small district school (little red schoolhouse of the past) or the big modern luxury palaces, tax money was taken from people by force in order to pay for them.

It is this tax support feature that has caused the present uproar over the prayer issue. Atheists, agnostics, and members of various non-Christian sects are taxed to support schools. They disapprove of the Bible and do not want it read to their children. They do not approve of Christian prayer. Since they support government schools and cannot avoid doing so, they look upon Bible reading and Christian praying as an invasion of their rights to their own religious beliefs.

But Christians pay taxes, too. And they want their children to read the Bible and to pray in a Christian manner. And they want the government schools to reflect their wishes.

The problem isn't in the nature of religion but in the nature of a single, all-powerful, tax-supported school system. Whatever it does or does not do respecting religion, someone will be injured.

INSTANT TYRANNY BILL

To the Editor:

The most frightening indictment yet of the Civil Rights Act of 1963 is given by Kentucky Congressman Frank Chelf, an "official author" of the bill, which, he admits, he signed out of the Judiciary Committee without even reading it, as a "favor" to the late President Kennedy. In an astounding statement, Chelf says:

"I am against everything (in the bill) in its present form. It is an awful bill. I had not realized before how bad it is. . . It will, in my opinion, extend federal domination over business, industry, and over individual citizens in a manner never attempted since the Constitution of the United States was adopted. It will destroy the constitutional checks and balances between Washington and the States. . ."

Americans should take sober thought.

Two eminent members of the American Bar Association read it, then warn that it destroys Americans' constitutional freedoms.

Eminent and bipartisan members of the Senate and the House read it, then warn that it destroys Americans' constitutional freedoms.

HAVE YOU READ THE BILL?

The Communist Party has read it — and is calling the faithful to "demonstrate" for its passage.

The National Council of Churches has read it — and churchmen are calling the faithful to "demonstrate" for its passage.

NAACP, FORE, SNCC, etc., have read it — and are calling the faithful to "demonstrate" for its passage.

The New Frontier has read it — and is calling the faithful to pressure for its passage.

The record is incredible — and frightening. An official "co-author" of the bill signs up in complete ignorance and solely as a "favor" to President Kennedy. How many other such accommodating congressmen similarly "favored" President Johnson in the bill's recent landslide approval by the House? How many accommodating solons will similarly "favor" President Johnson when it comes to the Senate?

A few concerned and informed senators are pledged to fight a delaying action to give the American people the time to inform themselves. Precious time to study this bill which in the lofty guise of securing freedom for some, destroys freedom of all.

Will you use that dearly-bought time? ? ? Write your senators for a copy of the Civil Rights Act of 1963. Read it. Then demand that they vote a resounding NO against this "instant tyranny" bill and a resounding YES for Americans' constitutional freedoms.

AN EXAMPLE OF '1984'

To the Editor:

A news item in the Wall Street Journal of January 15, indicated state and federal taxing agencies are cooperatively exchanging tax information. The goal of this is to catch any tax dodgers and insure the government gets all the money it lays claim to. Just a minute, you say, that money is mine; I earned it. Well, is it yours? Let's see.

The tenor of this mood of interchange of tax information has intensified to the point that ALL of a man's property — not just real estate — belongs to government. The wages you earn are not your wages. Indeed, these wages belong to government which most graciously allows you to keep a portion of them at all. The tens of thousands of income tax regulations are to insure that you don't receive too much of the government's money which YOU have earned. It is only just for the government to extract its expenses from its money before returning to its slaves a portion to provide them a degree of balm and to buy food with which to build a little muscle to earn more government money. The government a priori claim upon a man's wages as its own, fulfills the government hypothesis that its owns ALL property including ALL wages.

The slaves of government, you, the taxpayers, have been properly indoctrinated with the above hypothesis. This statement is suggested by the widely held view it is a citizen's DUTY to pay these just government claims (taxes) upon his property (including income), because after all it really is the government's money. Additionally, these just claims are the proper debt the taxpayers dutifully owe the government for the many beneficent services government provides (whether you want these "services" or not). And taxpayers generally believe they could not be free except for these government services. Hence, they humbly submit to government slavery in order to be FREE.

This contradiction does not constitute a paradox, strange tho it may be. Yes, slavery and freedom are contradictions, but only so long as freedom and slavery are understood to be two opposite concepts. When the belief becomes instilled (and installed) that slavery is freedom, the paradox disappears. Sadly enough, this is the state of thinking of the American taxpayers.

Taxpayers in our country today have accepted the socialistic welfare state almost completely. They clamor for each new socialistic program as tho they would die without it, and they abhor the thought of becoming self-responsible once again. They have accepted and lived with for such a long time the socialist welfare state, the slave state, that the old definition of freedom has been almost completely displaced by this new one of slavery. In the language of "newspeak," SLAVERY IS FREEDOM.

Is Orwell's "1984" only a fiction? What is freedom's status in the United States of America today?

Causes

From The Royal Bank of Canada Monthly Letter

It will help us to avoid misunderstandings if we know some of their causes.

There are many sparks which set misunderstanding ablaze, and since they are of about equally frequent occurrence there is no better order in which to mention them than alphabetically from anger to pride.

Trader Horn, the earthy philosopher in Mrs. Lewis's story, said: "There's nothing brings us closer akin to the apes than the tantrums we get into."

When we lose our tempers we offer humiliating spectacles, with dignity, common sense and justice thrown out the window.

The causes of anger may be brought under two headings: fear and mortification. When someone lets us down at work or in society the emotion of anger arises instinctively. We fear the outcome of the person's blunder or we are humiliated because he did that to us. We get so worked up that like Aase, one of the characters in Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," we "could make a meal of flints."

Then, forgetting that it is our reaction, and not the affront, which counts, we lose control of the situation. We write a snarling letter or speak a growling word. Our emotion, without the curb of our brains to guide it, leads headlong into a major misunderstanding.

We need to recognize the fact that we have control only over our own reactions. In our daily contacts with people we are like the lowly amoeba, unable to push others around but only to withdraw or flow past them.

This is why the man who seeks to avoid misunderstandings flies into a great calm instead of into a great rage. His calmness offers nothing that another can grasp; it disarms his opponent; it heightens his own stature.

A man is as big as the things that make him mad. It is said that Sir Lancelot had several sizes of spear, and would call for his Great Spear or his Lesser Spear as occasion demanded. It is wise, in our own interests, to err on the side of gentleness.

Anxiety is a frequent cause of misunderstanding. It results from the clash of desire and fear. In this country, where an outstanding job has been done in the way of decreasing deaths from many diseases, we have an increasing number of people who find life miserable because they are torn by anxieties.

Many of our anxieties are out of all proportion to the real dangers of the situation. Propagated as they are by the methods of news distribution which pursue us thruout our waking hours, and nurtured on our ignorance of the many facets displayed by life today, these anxieties become mothers of evil broods.

Wit and Whimsy

A vacation is a short duration of recreation, preceded by a period of anticipation, and followed by a period of recuperation.

A fourth grade Colorado Springs teacher, discussing heroines from history, asked the class if it knew who Joan of Arc was.

"I think," piped a small voice from the rear of the room, "she was Noah's wife."

Most of us don't put our best foot forward until we get the other one in hot water.

Executive: A guy who is always annoying the hired help by asking them to do something.

Jean: "Yes, he's a gentleman and a sculler."

Communism Lives by Loot and Lunacy

By VOLLIE TRIPP
From Christian Economics

It is widely claimed that communism is bred by poverty and misery, and can only be countered by raising the living standards of depressed peoples. This theory is used to justify massive foreign giveaway programs.

Perhaps those who subscribe to the above can explain a few curious facts. If the theory is true, why is it that in Italy almost the entire communist strength is concentrated in the prosperous, not to say booming, industrial North, and has gained few converts in the impoverished South?

Why is it that in France, Germany, Belgium and England the greatest Communist strength has always been in the relatively prosperous industrial sections, with very little influence in the poorer sections of those countries? Also, perhaps they can explain why Portugal, perhaps the poorest nation in Western Europe, has very few Communists and no Communist problem?

To confound the stargazers still more, in our own country the pattern holds good. New York and California, our two most prosperous states, have about half of the known domestic Communists and the Red infestation is stronger in the prosperous industrial sections of the North, making very little headway in the poorer South.

The oft-repeated statement that communism feeds and breeds on poverty is itself but a clever bit of Communist propaganda. The very opposite is true! The Red plague feeds on wealth, the wealth of others, naturally, since it is incapable of producing much wealth of its own.

In the very beginning of modern socialism, it was the seized private fortunes of the Romanoff family, an immense store of gold, jewels, works of art, that financed Lenin's revolution in 1917. The state treasure and the hoarded savings of the Russian people were duly seized, and carried the Red revolution forward for several years. In due time the Reds turned upon the little Baltic nations of Latvia and Estonia, looting them systematically to bolster their faltering economy. Herzgovnia, once a part of Austro-Hungary, was absorbed by Red Yugoslavia for the same reason.

Russian communism has faced more than one crisis, when only foreign help in massive doses of American dollars, managed to save it. At the close of the First World War, famine gripped this unhappy land, and it was American capitalist aid, administered by Herbert Hoover who saved the day for the Reds and their system.

The system would have foundered again during the last war except for our help in the form of some 11 billions of capitalistic dollars, not a dime of which was ever paid back. Following the war it might have gone down had it been denied the wealth stolen from Germany, Poland, Hungary, Finland, Czechoslovakia.

Communism lives by loot — and the lunacy of the policy which insists on keeping our deadly enemies alive by massive gifts of the people's hard-won cash. In a saner, simpler, sounder era, helping the enemy would have been called treason, nothing less, and the guilty could have been shot.

Leaving out of the reckoning the Lend Lease and Marshall Plan Aid billions, we have continued to bail out communism and Communists all over the world in a display of idiocy without example in history. We have given India some four billions, a nation that has repeatedly voted against us in favor of Russia and will turn against us again when help against the Red Chinese is no longer needed. We have poured undisclosed amounts into Sukarno's Indonesia to help that Red despot complete his subjugation of the Indonesian people.

We have acted as bailsman for the Red fox, Tito, of Yugoslavia, to the tune of over three billions and according to Henry Taylor, "Tito belongs to an old line of murderers, and not of warriors. Few men's hands are so bloody as his."

Communist enemies like Gomulko of Poland, and Castro of Cuba, have been nurtured and sustained in their depredations often to the dismay and chagrin of the few nations we can call our friends. Superbandits like Castro are in a position to browbeat us today because they were allowed to steal American property and because of our idiotic attempt to buy their good behavior with American largesse.

So goes the long, dismal story of aid to our enemies and to nations notoriously corrupt and venal. Most of the so-called "new nations" of Africa have their hands extended, palms cupped, be it noted, while they openly despise and vote against us.

It is scarcely too much to say that communism — of and by itself — could never have become anything more than an irritating canker on the body politic without the wealth stolen from the hard-working and thrifty, and without the even greater sums gratuitously and stupidly handed out to them on pretexts devoid of logic or reason.

In fair competition with capitalism, communism has no more chance than a night crawler in a herd of geese. There are poignant reasons. For one, the system, being based on fraud, force and compulsion, will always require a very high percentage of the population in enforcement work, leaving fewer for productive work. Too, the system utterly fails to use one of man's most powerful creative instincts, the drive to improve his personal fortunes.

From a pragmatic point of view, there must be wealth for the Commies to grab. Without this wealth — produced by others — they cannot reward their party faithful nor arrange control of the dissenters. Historically, the Communists have shown little interest in people who had no wealth to seize. While the Chinese on the average were poor, the fact remains that the accumulated wealth of the merchants and landowners, in the aggregate, was vast. It was this wealth, much of it in the form of gold stolen from its murdered owners, that has kept the Communists in power thus far in that country.

Communism is being kept alive all over the world by the stolen wealth of people who saved by hard work and thrift. While we have been the chief contributors, we are not the only ones. There are various terms for this theft, as expropriation, nationalization, and so on. On every hand we can see our immensely productive capitalist system being used for our own destruction, but seem powerless to stop it. Far from containing communism, our foreign aid money is being used to underwrite its failures, to sustain and keep alive this malignant philosophy.

The Local Scene

See You in Church?

By RUFUS L. PORTER

Always known as a city of churches, Colorado Springs continues to hold her own in this respect. The churches have kept pace with the population growth in El Paso County. Many handsome new places of worship have been built during the years since World War II. Several more are in the planning stage and most of the older ones have been rebuilt, expanded or rehabilitated. It is a pleasure to drive around the city and its suburbs and see the beautiful new church buildings. Up at Woodland Park they have a couple of fine new ones, too. And even Cascade is dreaming of a nice new church building. This is not to belittle all the fine old churches that have become landmarks of the Pikes Peak Region, but merely to welcome the new ones.

I have been unable to get a report on the number of new church buildings that have been erected since the era of growth set in, but the number has certainly been considerable.

Reverend Sigurd E. Burch, president of the El Paso County Ministerial Alliance and pastor of the brand new Trinity Methodist Church at 1920 Henderson Avenue on the West Side, informed me that there have been five new Methodist churches built in the area during the past seven years. All told, there are 150 churches of various denominations listed in the latest telephone directory. A few of the new buildings have taken the place of older ones where the congregation expanded enough to require more room, and a better building seemed to be a happier solution than enlarging the old one. But most of the handsome new churches have been built in the new housing areas to accommodate the ever - increasing numbers who are moving into the region.

According to Reverend Burch, the Ministerial Alliance now has membership of 56, an increase of 25 percent over a few years ago. "But," he said, "less than half of the ministers who are eligible belong."

"The purpose of the Alliance," said Burch, "is to find areas of mutual regard and respect among the various denominations, and to try to draw the whole community together into a closer spiritual relationship and a sense of unanimity.

"There are also several other intradenominational associations of ministers in the region that are loosely connected with the Alliance, such as the one here on the West Side, which has ten members. These ministers meet together occasionally, at lunch or over coffee, to talk things over, iron out differences and discuss such subjects as philosphy, theology and good government. And sometimes we hold joint services.

"The Alliance and the other ministerial organizations cooperate in community endeavors and fill an important place in building a spiritual and moral climate and in bringing the various denominations into closer harmony. The chief concerns of the Alliance are the community and the nature of the world's progress in spiritual and moral development. The Ministerial Alliance in El Paso County is the finest fellowship I have found anywhere."

Reverend Burch points out that the Roman Catholic ministry and also the Jewish ministry are interested in and friendly toward the work of the Alliance. "Both the Christian and the Jewish faiths," he said, "are based in the Old Testament and their moral and spiritual consciences are similar and they hold a basically mutual concern for man's welfare."

Reverend Burch is enthusiastic about the modern move for unification of various denominations of Christian belief. It is going forward smoothly and several large denominations have already been successfully unified. The move is spreading among Protestant churches and the Catholics are showing interest in its possibilities.

Asked how strong differences of opinion and belief could be reconciled, Reverend Burch replied, "I do not believe there are really any insurmountable differences. After all, we are all Christians. We have differences, yes. But they are not necessarily divisive. I believe they can sometimes be sources of unification and respect."

"The union of all Christian churches will take many years," he continued, "and may not ever be completely realized. But the movement is certainly leading to greater mutual understanding and respect, and to more mutual endeavor and less animosity between the sects. I do not say that complete union is impossible, but I do not believe it will occur in the foreseeable future. However, it is an active movement and is bringing many benefits to the Christian world already.

"The unification idea started at grass roots among the congregations, as did all the great church movements of the past, and worked its way up to the higher authorities."

All the churches in the area have gained in membership and there is greatly renewed activity in church work among the laymen. These are healthy signs, believes Reverend Burch, for the improvement of the spiritual and moral climate of the region.

Scouts Host Military Family At Honor Court

M. Sgt. and Mrs. Benjamin Millstein and family, 1101 N. Corona St., were hosts, Friday evening, to boys of Explorer Post 23 and their families. Their son, Leo, is an Eagle Scout in the Post.

The occasion was planned as a Court of Honor and an experience in World Brotherhood.

The Millsteins are recent transfers from Taiwan, and Mrs. Millstein, who is of Chinese ancestry, planned and prepared a supper of exotic Chinese dishes. Of these, egg roll, or spring roll, was the most familiar to the guests. Less familiar was a dish composed of chicken, walnuts, and mushrooms. Fried mixed rice with succulent shrimp was a hit with many of the guests. Mrs. Millstein also prepared a dish she called green pepper and beef. Other mothers of the Post contributed fried chicken, cole slaw, and ice cream. Jasmine tea was served by Mrs. Millstein.

Following the dinner, David Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Robinson, was presented the Eagle Award by Scout Executive Jim Wiant. The winning of this award is the high point of a boy's Scouting experience.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Wiant and Mr. and Mr Lawrence Cotton. Mr. Cotton is institutional representative of the Scouting program at First Methodist Church, of which Explorer Post 23 is a part.

Colonel Says NCO's Are Marked Men

In an address to the latest graduating class of the Ft. Carson Noncommissioned Officers Academy, Chief of Staff Col. H. V. Middleworth called the graduates "marked men."

Academy graduates have a distinct advantage over other soldiers, stated Col. Middleworth. They qualify two-to-one for promotions over other soldiers.

"You are a cut above the average soldier, or else you wouldn't be here," he told the graduates.

Col. Middleworth stressed the "open door" policy of commanders and the significance of the chain of command in the smooth accomlpishment of a military mission.

If the troops know they can always take their problems to their superiors, whether it be a squad leader up to, and including the brigade commander or even the commanding general if necessary, much misunderstanding and trouble could be avoided, Col. Middleworth explained.

"Each soldier on this post and of our division," stated the colonel, "must realize that the commanding general's office is always open. The soldier's welfare is foremost in his mind."

One special piece of advice Col. Middleworth summarized his address with was that the graduates should always know the "why" for every order they give and be prepared to share this knowledge with the men under them.

Ingels Named To Post With National Realtors

Hubert E. Ingels, a member of the Colorado Springs Board of Realtors, Inc., has been appointed State Chairman for Colorado, the Headquarters office of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers in Chicago, announced today.

The Institute — composed of 17,000 Realtors — is the largest affiliate of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and has as its main objective the education of its members to serve the public better.

One of Ingels' most important ties will be to stimulate panel discussions on brokerage problems at real estate board meetings and during the state conventions.

Thru such discussions, Realtors are kept constantly up-to-date on new and proven methods in the way of realty advertising, financing and taxation. They are thus better able to serve the public in home buying and other realty investments.

Chemist Will Speak to Palmer, Wasson Students

A member of the American Chemical Society will be in Colorado Springs March 18 to lecture to science classes at Palmer and Wasson High Schools.

Dr. W. T. Lippincott, a chemistry professor at Ohio State University, will speak to Palmer students at 12:45 p.m. and to Wasson students at 2:45 p.m.

His lecture at Palmer will be on "Some Chemistry of Living Cells" and the Wasson lecture will be on "Four Profiles of Moden Chemistry."

Dr. Lippincott's appearance here is being sponsored by the Colorado Section of the American Chemical Society. Each year the society sends its outstanding members around the country as guest lecturers to science classes of high schools.

Dr. Lippincott was born in 1924 in Maryland. He received a bachelor of science degree in 1948 from Capital University and earned his Ph.D. degree at Ohio State in 1954.

He has taught at Capital University, Michigan State University and the University of Florida. He joined the faculty at Ohio State in 1961 where he also serves as head of the Division of General Chemistry.

Dr. Lippincott is a member of the advisory boards of the Journal of Chemical Education and Chemistry.

His research activities are concentrated in three areas: free radical reactions in solution, particularly autoxidation of hydrocarbons; boron organic chemistry, and the effect of steric factors in reactions of organometallics.

Women Receiving High Paying Government Jobs

Since President Johnson made a request in a Jan. 17 cabinet meeting that more women be given more responsible and higher paying positions in federal government, more than 40 women have been placed or promoted into positions paying over 12,000 annually.

She is Dr. Helen G. Morris, a Fellow in Research at the Denver VA hospital since 1961, who has recently been promoted to senior grade physician at the hospital. She is also an instructor in medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine.

Born in Denver, Dr. Morris received her B.A. degree from the University of Colorado in 1952, her M.D. degree from the University School of Medicine in 1956, interned and took her residency program at Colorado General Hospital in Denver, and remained there from 1959 to 1961 as a Fellow in endocrinology.

The Student Council sponsored the whole project, the proceeds of over $100 will go into a council fund to help send Julie Jones, State Student Council secretary, to Maine for the National Convention during the summer. This is the first year that Manitou has had a representative to go to a National Convention.

The Challenge of Tomorrow was the theme of the first statewide National Honor Society Conference, sponsored by the University of Colorado, on Saturday, February 29. "The purpose of this meeting is to recognize the outstanding students in the high schools of our state and provide them the opportunity to participate in an intellectually stimulating experience," stated A. Dwight Grotewold, director of school relations at CU.

Following registration (8:00), the keynote address was delivered by Professor E. W. Zeibarth of the University of Minnesota.

Students had the opportunity to sit in on such panel discussions as: "Conformity or Creativity in Your Life — a Challenge to Growth"; "The World of 1980 — What Will Your Life Be Like?"; "Preparing for You Life Outside Your Career"; "Your Responsibilities in an International World — a Growing Challenge."

Preceding a luncheon, the students were conducted on a tour of the Colorado University campus. After lunch many students attended one of the following: 1. Discussion of Arts and Sciences Honors Programs and Sample Honors Seminar. 2. Discussion of Engineering Honors Programs and Sample Honors Seminar. 3. Panel Discussion: "Is a Liberal Arts Education Really Practical in Today's World of Specialization?"

The charge for the day was a $1.50 fee per person for the luncheon and all Nation Honor Society members were invited to attend the conference.

Last week the "B" squad Mustangs fell to the Air Academy 52-32. The squad had great difficulty in rebounding and numerous fouls for both teams mounted.

The Mustangs had trouble getting things going in the second quarter as they scored only 4 points to 11 points put in by the Kadets. George Whitt took high scoring position dropping in 7 points. Larry Olsen, coach, was looking forward for a last win as the season closed Friday with a game with Fountain.

The "C" squad tournament was held this week. Teams playing the first day were: Harrison vs Air Academy, Watson vs Fountain, Sproul vs Ft. Carson, Cheyenne vs Manitou.

Pioneers Favor Preservation of Summit House

The El Paso County Pioneers Assn. has gone on record in favor of preserving the old Pikes Peak Summit House as an historical building.

The association's board of directors voted unanimously last week to support W. S. "Bill" Crosby's resolution to preserve the building. Crosby, 90, is a longtime resident of the Pikes Peak Region and authority on its history.

The old summit house is scheduled to be razed this spring, after the new building is completely finished.

BENNY LEARNS KENNEDY WAS AVID PROGRAM FAN

HOLLYWOOD — When Jack Benny celebrated his 14th year in TV, Dave Chasen opened up his restaurant on Monday night and packed it with friends and well-wishers. I'd just finished Jim Bishop's book, "A Day in the Life of President Kennedy," a charming, warm story completed a week before the assassination. Bishop wrote that the only program which could make the President close his folder of homework and turn on the set was the Jack Benny show. When I told this to Jack, he beamed: "That's wonderful. Years ago Joseph Kennedy wrote me that he liked to listen to my show on radio and made all his children listen, too. I guess his son, Jack, kinda got the habit."

At the party Don Wilson told me he'd been with Jack for 30 years, "a lifetime of fun." Then we laughed over a few shorts about cooking we made years ago. Eddie (Rochester) Anderson told me that during his spare time he's built a boat — 17 feet long and waterproof.

If the State Department succeeds in muzzling "Dr. Strangelove," I'll give them a great big pat on the back. The Washington Post ran a piece saying that the film can cause the United States as much harm as many a coup or revolution. Another writer charged: "No Communist could dream of a more effective anti-American film to spread abroad than this one. United States officials, including the President, had better take a look at it to see its effect on the national interest."

Saks showed their evening gowns for the Oscar derby. Perfectly beautiful. But the French fashions in the morning paper the following day were something else again. If any woman puts on chiffon culottes trimmed with ruffles for evening wear, she's out of her cotton pickin' mind. One designer went back to Marlene Dietrich's trousers, with bell bottoms yet!

Anna Maria Alberghetti paid $15,000 for a sleevless sable coat for her Chicago opening. Years ago I took her to Marusia's to select a gown for her first Cocoanut Grove appearance. She loved one but hesitated at the cost — $175. We finally persuaded her to part with the money because she looked so lovely in it.

That Perry Como is a travelin' man. Now he'll do a show in New Orleans with Mickey Rooney. The one he did here with Dean Martin and Lena Horne was brilliant. It should get some kind of award.

Rooney goes to Ireland this summer to film "Five Leaf Clover," a story he wrote, with Pat O'Brien, the Abbey Players and, he hopes, Maureen O'Hara. Mickey's mother called with good news. After four months of treatment for cancer, she's been released by the doctors. It all started when she broke her hip in October. She'll be out of the wheel chair this week and is feeling on top of the world.

William Wyler found two charming English actors, Samantha Eggar and Terrence Stamp, for his next picture, "The Collector." Paramount was excited over Samantha at one time. Nothing happened. Now Wyler gets her. The picture was supposed to be shot entirely in England, but since Mike Frankovich is head of Columbia Pictures things have changed. He thinks it's time we gave more people here jobs. At an added cost of $300,000 he will bring the company to Hollywood for all interiors. He's also ordered "King Rat" to be filmed at the studio here instead of abroad. Bryan Forbes wrote the screenplay and will direct. Both Frank Sinatra and Steve McQueen are wanted.

The famous photographer, Roloff Beny, writes from Alberta, Canada, that he's back from a trip above the Arctic circle where he lunched on raw caribou and har. Says a good red wine would have helped to wash it down. "I saw them selling your book 'The Whole Truth' as far north in Canada as Yellowknife in the Northwest Territory, so you may have to do a lecture tour in the land of the Eskimos and Royal Canadian Mounties. May I be your personal guide?"

I ONCE HEARD David Susskind argue that TV sponsors were wasting their bankrolls on children because they had no money to spend. He cited his own kids as proof— they get $2 a week allowance. Susskind should try taking a child thru a supermarket . . . Proof of what they can do is the Lassie show. It's been on TV so long it's worn out two Timmys, heaven knows how many collies, and now it's worn out the scenery. They had to shift the locale to a national forest . . . The modern child, perhaps wised up by the varied programs on TV, is more sophistticated than the youngster of yesteryear. He will not buy deliberate corn for humor. He demands a certain class to his film fare. It's not like the old days when the movie was thhe only escape for Saturday afternoon. Then he'd buy anything because films were a novelty. Now he's more discerning; more aware of fraud and cheapness.

THERE'S NO REASON in the world why quality pictures can't be made for this audience of millions. The libraries are full of children's classics. If men can write them, men can also film them. The wise producer might note that many of these properties are in public demain or could be bought at reasonable prices for a panting audience . . . Any producer who would take time could have his eyes opened by visiting the children's section of a library after school. Kids crowd in looking for their favorite stories. They read them over and over, and ask why pictures aren't made from them. It's difficult to explain that producers are too busy with trash.

ANOTHER EYE - OPENER is the millions of kids who sit before a TV set watching a fine old movie made especially for them a generation ago. "The Wizard of Oz" has become a film classic in our time, growing more popular each year. On its fourth rrerun it was number 4 in Nielsen ratings. The kids are fascinated by old movies because they were good. Like adults, they enjoy the crowd participation a movie theater provides, but they won't pay their dimes and nickels for that alone. You've got to have something on the screen. They know that "The Wizard of Oz" is a classic without even knowing what the word means. Somebody who gives them a picture with class can make a fortune.

WHEN MOVIE MAKERS use children in films, they come up with "Lord of the Flies" (about a group of boys who become savages) or "Children of the Damned," a horror film whose advertising slogan is "Beware the eyes that paralyze." I've had a barrel of mail on that one. Emmi K. Wolff, of Chicago, wrote: "I saw it at a neighborhood theater. How can a company like M-G-M release this sort of thing? My kids are grown so I don't worry for them, but what about children who are packed off to a movie regardless of the picture? The studio that made 'The Yearling' should be ashamed of itself."

YMCA to Offer Home Aid Courses Soon

The local YMCA will offer an adult home maintenance and improvement course beginning March 19th. The course will include theory, class discussions, shop classes, elementary drawings, the proper use of woods and the use and care of tools.

It will also include instruction in building on extra rooms, basements, carports, garages and other additions to the home. Less ambitious projects such as cabinets, shelves, storage spaces and built-ins will also be included.

The cost of the course, which will be for ten weeks, will be ten dollars plus materials. The course will be held in the shop in the YMCA Youth Center at Bijou and Weber. Special times will be set aside for the use of the shop by men taking the course which will be in addition to the class times.

Anyone interested in taking the course should contact Bob Wierman at 633-4643 the Program Secretary of the "Y" or Marv Browning at 632-4857 the instructor.

'Hot Line' Kept Open; Lines Are 'Meaningless'

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Once every hour, seven days a week, a terse message crackles over wires between Washington and Moscow.

It is gibberish. It may say "the quick brown fox jumped over the lazy dog's back." It may be a line from a musty technical journal or a scrap of classical Russian literature.

One hour the meaningless message goes from West to East; the next, East to West, hour upon hour, week upon week, month upon month. And yet "meaningless" may not be the right word.

The messages are test transmissions of the "hot line" Russia and the United States set up last year to communicate in the moments before — and hopefully to forestall — mutual nuclear destruction.

They reflect much about U.S.-Soviet relations — mistrust, fearful power, the unattainability of real disarmament, the nibbling efforts to achieve some protection from power.

In 18 years of negotiations Russia and the United States have achieved no agreement for even a modicum of real disarmament. They have achieved four agreements for steps designed to whittle away at the risk of war.

The first was the Antarctic Treaty of 1959, which banned military operations including nuclear weapons and nuclear tests from the Antarctic continent and provided for inspection against cheating. Early this year the United States conducted the first inspection of Russian Antarctic scientific bases under the treaty.

The second agreement, in June, 1963, was the hot line agreement. It grew out of a long deadlock in Geneva disarmament negotiations, after the Russians, in April, 1963, suddenly agreed to discuss "collateral measures."

It also stemmed from the October, 1962, Cuba-missile crisis in which Russia and the United States stared into the abyss of war and had to exchange messages by press wires because diplomatic channels were too slow.

The third, in July, 1963, was the limited nuclear test ban agreement, finally signed in August. It banned nuclear testing in the atmosphere, under water and in space — all areas where tests can be detected from afar without inspection on Soviet soil, to which Russia objects.

The fourth, last October, was a U.S.-Soviet agreement which made possible a United Nations to refrain from placing weapresolution calling on all nations ons of mass destruction in outer space.

This last had a hollow ring inasmuch as military experts say it is impractical at present to try to put nuclear weapons into orbit. But the Russians wanted it — perhaps to demonstrate a mood of cooperation.

U. S. officials felt violations could be fairly readily detected. They also felt that maybe it was good that both countries agreed not to do something neither intended to do. Otherwise, in their rivalry, they might both try to do it for fear the other would first.

All four agreements have elements in common. They are small steps—in some ways only psychological. None required either side to change its major, entrenched positions.

The Russians, in the limited test ban, did not have to accept inspection on Soviet soil—which they call "espionage." The inspection in the Antarctic involves only scientific bases. In none of the agreements did the United States accept from Russia promises which it could not itself check with reasonable accuracy.

In Geneva, 17 nations including the United States and Russia are conducting what is called a "disarmament conference." But the practical hopes of this conference for the foreseeable future appear to lie in this same area of limited steps short of true disarmament.

Some of the proposals now being discussed in Geneva:

—President Johnson on Jan. 21 proposed a "freeze" in the building of additional strategic missiles, bombers and anti-missile-missiles. This plan calls for inspection of U.S. and Soviet missile and bomber factories and test sites. This would be a big dose of inspection for Russia to swallow, but not as much as a REDUCTION of missiles, which would require inspection of military bases and war launch sites.

—Both sides have toyed with the idea of setting up ground "observation" posts at rail junctions and air and seaports in Russia, the United States and Eastern and Western Europe, to warn of troop movements which might be preliminary to surprise attack. Their importance would lie in the fact that nuclear war could well grow out of conventional attack.

—Both have toyed with the possibility that the United States and Russia might each take an equal number of obsolescent bombers — U.S. B47's and Russian Badgers—and destroy them under mutual inspection so they do not fall into the hands of smaller powers.

—Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev on New Year's Eve proposed that the world powers sign an agreement to renounce the use of force in territorial disputes. Though his specific plan contained pitfalls for the West, President Johnson replied that further talks would be welcomed.

In addition to the search for "limited" agreements a new body of thought on how to cope with the arms race has become apparent in recent months. Khrushchev has referred to it as arms reduction by "mutual example."

High officials here, though they have not talked of it publicly, have called it "arms control by coincidence of policy."

For example, the United States, announced on Jan. 8 that because expected requirements are being amply met the Atomic Energy Commission is cutting down its production of fissionable materials for nuclear weapons. President Johnson called on Russia to do the same.

It would probably be impossible to get a formal agreement to limit such production. But administration officials believe it may be possible by one country making clear what it is doing to induce the other to do the same.

The theory depends on the premise that U.S.-Soviet interests in putting some limits on the arms race coincide. Officials are aware there are many pitfalls in it. Russia recently announced 600 million ruble cut in its defense budget. The U.S. is also cutting its defense budget. But there is some doubt whether the Soviet cut is real.

Khrushchev says he has made cuts in his armed forces and will make more if other Western states do the same. He says he is putting more resources into a new chemical industry. But part of this is plastics, and plastics have important military uses.

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

WASHINGTON — Last September three top Kennedy Administration officials felt the gravest risk involved in the nuclear test ban treaty with Soviet Russia would be psychological — a national state of mind they called "euphoria."

This had to be avoided at all costs, they agreed, for a relaxed, complacent feeling toward cold war problems would tend to lower our vigilance and nurse the illusion that international tensions had decreased.

The three who spoke out strongly at the time were Secretary of State Rusk, Secretary of Defense McNamara and Gen. Maxwell Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Their testimony before a Senate committee was significant last September. It is worth recalling now because any careful inspection of President Johnson's statement on the dimensions of our foreign problems clearly shows that he is wide open to attack for being more for euphoria than against it.

Richard M. Nixon has already seized on Johnson's foreign policy utterances in this respect to make political hay. In a speech at a Republican dinner in Cincinnati, Ohio, Nixon said "the administration must quit covering up our problems abroad by feeding the American people a diet of sugar-coated sleeping pills."

He and other name Republicans can make out a good partisan case along this line. The President in his Los Angeles speech said in effect that our global problems are really little ones compared with those of the Communist world.

Previously Johnson had labeled our troubles abroad — involving Cyprus, Viet Nam, Zanzibar and Cuba — "distresses" rather than crises. Even the blantant British and French nose-thumbing at our Cuba trade embargo received a once-over-lightly treatment from the President — certainly nothing to strain our basic friendly attachments with those two allies.

The President may not advocate precisely national euphoria, but there is no argument that he is making an effort to get a relaxed feeling about the cold war to permeate the nation.

THREAT TO NORTH VIET NAM IS DOWNGRADED

This holds true even in connection with his Los Angeles warning that South Viet Nam might carry the war into Communist North Viet Nam even if to do so might provoke Red China to join the hostilities. This Johnson threat is now being officially discounted with an explanation that it was more of a psychological maneuver than anything else.

When this euphoria danger was emphasized last September by Rusk, McNamara and Taylor, it was against a backdrop of foreign developments far less likely to breed the disease nationally than developments since.

At the time there were only three important developments in East-West relations which tended to leave the impression that cold war issues were relaxing. Foremost was the theoretical lifting of the threat of a nuclear holocaust. The "atomic stalemate" situation had developed as a result of the outcome of the Cuban missile crisis. The balance of terror between the U.S. and the USSR had presumably been recognized as prohibiting an atomic war.

The Senate was then about to ratify the atmospheric test ban treaty with Moscow, and the USSR was just starting to get a favorable response to its proposal to buy $300 million worth of American wheat.

Gen. Taylor agreed with McNamara and Rusk that the signs of more compatible relations with Russia could have a most disturbing impact on national thinking.

He revealed that the most serious reservation that the Joint Chiefs had about the test ban agreement concerned national euphoria.

Taylor could repeat that warning even more strongly today. The wheat deal has been made.

President Johnson has proposed a big "peace offensive." He has deliberately downgraded the significance of all present world trouble spots compared with those when John F. Kennedy was in the White House. His emphasis on the need of patient adjustments of our problems abroad has been coupled with criticism of "alarmists" (Republicans, of course) who express worry over cold war incidents.

STATE DEPARTMENT'S OFFICIAL THEORY

The official line, as it emanates from the State Department — despite Rusk's onetime anxiety over the spread of euphoria — is that our Allies are acting up here and there, challenging our cold war policy, simply because the threat of an all-out nuclear war no longer exists. They no longer need the umbrella of our protection, for peace is just around the corner, even if slightly unstable.

Nixon is not the only big-name American to hit at the danger of feeding "the American people a diet of sugar-coated pills." Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, retired former Army intelligence chief, has warned of the perils involved in accepting the "nuclear stalemate" theory.

In a Detroit speech which appeared in the Congressional Record, Trudeau said that "the atomic test ban treaty has encouraged a dangerous complacency and satisfaction on the part of many."

He scornfully upbraided those (like the President) who say "Communism is receding." If so, said Trudeau, "then freedom should be advancing, (and) there should be peace and stability in the free world and turmoil and trouble in Communist lands, but the very reverse is true."

What Trudeau and Nixon have said points the way to the fundamental partisan debate over foreign policy in this election year. It will be over the administration's effort to lull the people into a feeling of security, when there is a considerable question as to whether euphoria should be artificially stimulated.

Cuba Signs Contract For Buses, Parts

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Cuban government has signed a second contract with Leyland Motors Ltd., of Great Britain for delivery of buses and spare parts, Havana radio said today.

The second contract calls for 50 buses of 45-seat capacity and spare parts. The value was set at $1.5 million.

An earlier agreement between Cuba and the British firm called for 400 buses and spare parts valued at $10 million.

In a broadcast heard in Miami, Havana radio said the first vehicles are expected to arrive in Cuba next September.

Many Will Claim Cool Millions Of Moriarty

By RAYNER PIKE

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—From his cell in Trenton State Prison, Joseph V. (Newsboy) Moriarty is watching as many as 14 contenders fight over a neat little bundle of $2.4 million—cash.

"If American enterprise responds to this new opportunity cache, this one $168,675.52. This sponds to this new opportunity expansion—with new production and new products—with the creation of new jobs—then the tax cut will bring greater abundance to all Americans. Then the federal government will not have to do for the economy what the economy should do for itself."

The tax cut, when fully effective in 196 .5will make available an additional $11.5 billion in spending power, of which $2.4 billion will go to corporations.

The administration envisions this as providing more money for consumers, higher profits for business, more jobs, reinforcements for the gold supply, broad levelers for the business cycle, new restraints on government spending and extra impetus for the antipoverty program.

Frederick R. Kappel, chairman of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., expressed the opinion that the cut will "have the possibility of substantial economic stimulation."

He said the effect on AT&T will be a $55-million tax saving this year, an increase of $100 million in expenditures for construction and creation of 12,000 to 15,000 new jobs with the company and its suppliers.

Individuals whose income taxes are withheld from their wages will first notice the cut on payroll checks dated March 5 and thereafter.

Steel and automobile production, bulwarks of the economy, high rate.

Output of steel, showing an increase for the eighth consecutive week, reached an eight-month high. Mills turned out 2,299,000 tons of ingots, up 1 per cent from 2,277,000 the previous week. Operations were at better than 72 per cent of estimated capacity.

The automobile industry turned out its one-millionth car of the year during the week and aimed at a goal of 650,000 for February.

Assemblies totaled an estimated 171,800 passenger cars against 169,770 the previous week and 148,689 a year ago.

Overtime work was planned at five of General Motors' 23 plants and seven of Ford's 16.

Dealers sold 208,400 domestic-made cars in the middle 10 days of February, a gain of 7 per cent over a year earlier. Chrysler and Ford showed gains of 16 per cent over a year ago and General Motors was up 4 per cent. American Motors was off 16 per cent.

The stalled shipment of wheat to the Soviet Union got moving again after the International Maritime Union called off its nine-day boycott on loading grain. T oget the longshoremen back to work, President Johnson ordered that 50 per cent of the wheat sold under future export licenses be carried in United States flag ships.

Sangre De Cristo Toll Road Plan Being Proposed

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's Department of Highways has been ordered to study the possibility of building a toll road and tunnel through the Sangre de Cristo mountains between Las Animas and Costilla counties.

A resolution calling for the study was driven through the Senate late Friday by Sen. James Connelly, D-Trinidad. The final vote was unanimous. The House had earlier passed the measure sponsored by Rep. Phillip Massari, D-Trinidad.

When the measure came up in the Senate, Sen. Fay DeBerard, R-Kremmling, offered an amendment calling for a similar study of the Devil's Thumb route, which would link Boulder and Grand Counties. This route was seriously considered for a tunnel several years ago.

As support began to mount for DeBerard's plan, the Senate leadership called a halt. Republican Leader Ranger Rogers of Littleton and Sen. Frank L. Gill, R-Hillrose, asked that the amendment be defeated. They said the resolution should be limited to Whiskey Creek and suggested that separate resolutions be submitted if other studies were wanted.

President's Press Conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—Here is a partial text of President Johnson's news conference Saturday:

President Johnson: I take pleasure this morning in announcing my intention of nominating Mr. William B. Bundy as assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. Mr. Bundy currently is the assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. He will bring to his new post great background and experience in the Far Eastern field.

Mr. Bundy will be replaced in the Defense Department post by Mr. John McNaughton, currently general counsel at the Department of Defense.

I also wish to announce the appointment of Mr. Daniel Luevano, of California, as assistant secretary of the Army. Mr. Luevano is the chief deputy director of the State Department of Finance in California, under Gov. Brown, and has consistently demonstrated his ability on a number of governmental posts in his native state, and as president of the University of California.

I would also like to announce the appointment of Mrs. Frankie Freeman, associate general counsel of the St. Louis Housing and Land Clearance Authority, as a member of the Civil Rights Commission. Mrs. Freeman is a former assistant to the attorney general of the State of Missouri, and distinguished Missouri lawyer.

The United States has successfully developed an advance experimental jet aircraft, now the A11, which has been tested in sustained flight at more than 2,000 miles an hour, and at altitudes in excess of 70,000 feet.

The performance of the A11 far exceeds that of any other aircraft in the world today. The development of this aircraft in the world has been made possible by major advances in aircraft technology of great significance to both military and commercial application. Several A11 aircraft are now being flight tested at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The existence of this program is being disclosed today to permit the orderly exploitation of this advanced technology in our military and commercial planes. This advanced experimental aircraft, capable of high speed and altitude, and long range performance at thousands of miles, constitutes the technological accomplishment that will facilitate the achievement of a number of important military and commercial requirements. The A11 aircraft now at Edwards Air Force Base are undergoing extensive tests to determine their capabilities as long range interceptors. The development of supersonic commercial transport aircraft will also be greatly assisted by the lessons learned from this A11 program. For example, one of the most important technological achievements in this project has been the mastery of the metallurgy and fabrication of titanium metal which is required for the high temperatures experienced by aircraft travelling at more than three times the speed of sound.

Arrangements are being made to make this and other important technical developments available under appropriate safeguards to those directly engaged in the supersonic transport program.

This project was first started in 1959, appropriate members of the Senate and the House have been kept fully informed on the program since the day of its inception. The Lockheed Aircraft Corp. at Burbank, California, is the manufacturer of the aircraft. The aircraft engine, the J58, was designed and built by the Pratt Whitney Aircraft Division, United Aircraft Corp. The experimental fire control and air-to-air missile system for the A11 was developed by the Hughes Aircraft Co.

On Monday we will release a report by Mr. Eugene Black, and Mr. Osborne on the supersonic transport program. This report was submitted to me in December. It makes a number of recommendations dealing with the financing and the management of the supersonic transport program. It has been referred to those government officials concerned for review and comment. On the basis of their analysis, a decision will be made on how the government will proceed.

I am glad to take any questions.

Q. Mr. President, can you confirm or deny the published reports that security measures taken in Florida were prompted by a tip that some suicide pilot might try to ram your plane?

A. I don't handle my own security. I was informed that there had been reasons for taking additional precautions, and I asked that the matter be carefully examined and handled entirely by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover and the Secret Service, both of whom worked closely together in connection with the President's security, and we followed the suggestions outlined, none of which I am familiar with in detail.

Q. Mr. President, how do you appraise the possible political impact of the Bobby Baker case?

A. I think that is a matter that the Senate is considering. They have witnesses to be heard. The Senate will make its report and take such action as they feel justified, and I am sure they will take proper action. We will have to see what the consequences are, following their recommendations after all of the evidence is in.

Q. Mr. President, sir, could you bring us up to date on the conflict in South Viet Nam and North Viet Nam, and whether or not you think that this conflict will be expanded? And, sir, are we losing there?

A. We have asked Secretary McNamara, who has made periodic visits to Saigon, to go to Viet Nam in the next few days. He will go there and have his conferences, and he will bring back very valuable information. We have a very difficult situation in Viet Nam. . .

I do not think that the speculation that has been made that we should enter into a neutralization of that area, or that we are losing the fight in that area, or that things have gone to pot there, are at all justified. I think that they do our cause a great disservice, but we are keeping in close touch with it daily. We have Ambassador Lodge, who heads our forces in that area. He is in constant communication with us. He makes recommendations from time to time. We act promptly on those recommendations. We feel that we are following the proper course and that our national interests are being fully protected.

Q. Mr. President, do you see any reason to fear that an extension of the fighting in South Viet Nam might bring Communist China or even the Soviet Union into the fight?

A. I know of no good purpose that would be served by speculating on the military strategy of the forces of the South Vietnamese. I think that a good deal of it is without justification. . . .

I would answer your question merely by saying that I do not care to speculate on what might happen. The plans that have been discussed in the papers are not plans that have come to my attention, or that I have approved.

Q. Mr. President, Henry Cabot Lodge, your ambassador to South Viet Nam, was your opponent for the vice presidency in 1960, and is a very strong potential Republican nominee this time. Doesn't that make conduct of your policy in South Viet Nam awkward, if not difficult?

A. No, I don't think so. Mr. Lodge had a brilliant career in the Senate. He served in the United States Army after resigning from the Senate. He had considerable military experience there. He served his country well at the United Nations under the administration of President Eisenhower.

I am unaware of any political inclinations he may have. I have seen nothing that he has done that has in any way interfered with his work out there. I think that he has properly assessed the situation himself by saying, since he is our ambassador there, that he cannot personally get involved in the campaign plans that some of his friends may have for him.

Q. Mr. President, do you see any hope of reaching an agreement in Panama before that country's presidential elections in May?

A. I would hope that we could reach an agreement as early as possible. As soon as I learned that the Panamanians had marched on our zone and we had a disturbance there, and some of our soldiers had been killed, some of the students had raised the flag and this disturbance had resulted, I immediately called the president of Panama on the telephone and said to him in that first exchange, "I want to do everything I can to work this problem out peacefully and quickly.

"Therefore, our people will meet with your people any time, anywhere, to discuss anything that will result in bringing peace and stopping violence."

The president asked me how long it would be before those discussions could take place, and I said we would have a team in the air within 30 minutes.

I designated Asst. Secretary Mann to immediately leave. We have been pursuing those discussions ever since. . . .

There has been no meeting of the minds. We realize that the treaties were written in 1903 and modified from time to time—that problems are involved that need to be dealt with and perhaps would require adjustment in the treaty in 1964 or 1965.

So we are not refusing to discuss and evolve a program that will be fair and just to all concerned. But we are not going to make any pre-commitments before we sit down on what we are going to do in the way of rewriting the treaties with a nation that we do not have diplomatic relations with. Once those relations are restored, we will be glad to discuss anything, any time, anywhere, and do what is just and what is fair and what is right.

Q. Mr. President, you have said repeatedly that peace is the paramount issue on your mind. I wonder, sir, if during your first contacts to date in the White House, you have seen any encouraging signs along this road, and, specifically, do you think a trend of the modern world is towards coexistence and conciliation rather than to strife.

A. We must be concerned, not just with our foreign policy in the Twentieth Century, but with the foreign policy of 110 or 120 other nations. We are dealing with serious problems in many places in the world that seriously affect the peace. When we solve these problems, I have no doubt but what there will be others that arise that have been in existence for centuries.

It is going to be the course of this government to do everything that we can to resolve these differences peacefully, even though they are not of our own making. There are very few of these situations which have been brought about by anything that we have done, but they are age-old differences that have existed for centuries . . .

I am encouraged and I am not myself, pessimistic about the future. I believe that we have adequate machinery to deal with these problems and I sincerely and genuinely believe that the people of the world want peace more than they want anything else, and that, in time, through their leaders, some way, somehow, we will find the answer.

Q. Mr. President, some difference was made to your first 100 days. How do you size up your first 100 days generally?

A. Well, I have been reasonably close to the presidency during the 30 years that I have been in Washington, particularly the last three years. But I have had many different impressions in the last 100 days than I had before I came to this awesome responsibility.

I am deeply impressed by the spirit of unity in this country, by the many people of all faiths and all sections who closed ranks and were anxious to unite the country following the tragic affair of last November. I am quite pleased with the manner in which the executive personnel have carried on following the death of their great leader, how the cabinet has functioned to a man in this crisis.

I think the continuity and the transition and the organization of the budget and the various messages, and the outlines of the program have created confidence in the country and in the world.

While I have been lavishly praised by some, and I think criticized by some, I think generally speaking the American nation has conducted itself as you would expect it to in a crisis and would get very good grades.

Insofar as I am concerned, I am rather pleased with what has been accomplished in the first 100 days as a result of men and women of good will working together.

Q. Mr. President, a political question, sir. President Kennedy told us that he would be willing to debate his Republican opponent in this coming election, had he lived. Would you be willing to do that, sir?

A. Well, I haven't been nominated yet. I think we will have plenty of time to decide that one after the convention. I will cross that bridge when I come to it.

Q. Mr. President, next month in Geneva a world trade conference will be started, organized by the United Nations, and more than 100 countries will participate in it. The other day Sen. Fulbright said he is going to discuss or have hearings in his committee on world trade. Would you tell us what is your attitude toward the developing of world trade?

A. We are very interested in that conference. We are going to participate in it and make every contribution we can. We think it is essential in the interest of the peoples of the world that trade barriers be pulled down. We are going to contribute everything we can to that end.

Q. Mr. President, I have seen speculation in print that it is your guess that you will run against Mr. Nixon. Is that true? If it is not true, can you tell us what your guess is in that respect, sir?

A. No, I haven't speculated on whether I will run or even who I will run against if I do run. That is a matter for the conventions of the two parties to determine when the delegates are properly chosen and they act. All I know about who may be interested in the job is from what I see in the papers, and the activities of the various individuals.

Q. Mr. President, our ambassador to Cyprus has been recalled for consultations. Could you give us your views on the Cyprus matter, please?

A. We are deeply concerned with it. We think it is a very serious situation. The matter is now pending in the United Nations, and we are doing our dead-level best to find the solution. We feel concern and feel it is extremely serious, but we believe that it will be resolved and we certainly hope so.

Q. Mr. President, would it be your policy to go to the people to explain administrative policy, to explain to them by radio and television, in the fireside chat tradition?

A. I think the President has a responsibility to do the very best job he can as President for all the people. I think in order to do that it is important for the people to know the problems that confront him. Man's judgment on any given question is no better than the facts he has on that question.

I shall have my press secretary hold daily briefings, at least two a day, and make available all information that can be made available to the press. From time to time I will see individual members of the press about press business, and I may see some of my fulltime friends socially occasionally, I hope without too much criticism.

Other times I will have them in my office, if I have any announcements that I think worthy of their attention and taking their time. At other times I will have a meeting like this to reach the folks who the press may not be able to reach through the ordinary newspaper or magazine media so that we can have radio coverage and television coverage.

I know of nothing in the President's job that is more important than being held accountable to the people, explaining to the people the reasons for his action, and telling the people something about the problems that confront him, because they are a very understanding group that wants to have the facts.

Q. Mr. President, there have been rumors, particularly from the Republicans, that you may be willing to compromise the public accommodations section of the civil rights bill. Is that true, and if it is not, is there any part of the bill that you feel might be the subject of compromise?

A. I have never discussed this with anyone and I would suspect that those rumors which you talk about, which I have read about, are strictly Republican in origin. I will say that the civil rights bill which passed the House is the bill that the administration recommends. I am in favor of it passing the Senate exactly in its present form. I realize there will be some senators who will want to strengthen it, some who will want to weaken it. But so far as this administration is concerned, its position is firm and we stand on the house bill.

Q. Mr. President, much speculation on Viet Nam this past week has been occasioned by the phrase in your speech last weekend about the dangerous game in Viet Nam. I think many of us are puzzled about what was the intention of that phrase and could you clarify your intention for us?

A. The speculation on Viet Nam has been going on for some time. I was out there in 1961. There was a good deal of speculation then. In my California speech, I intended to say just what I did, that aggressors who intend to envelope peaceful, liberty - loving, free people, and attempt to do so through aggressive means, are playing a very dangerous game. That is what I said, that is what I meant, and that is a very dangerous situation there and has been for some time.

Q. Mr. President, would you further assess the situation in the Far East in the light of Mr. Bundy's appointment there, and the problems he may face?

A. We know that we have very serious problems in that area. We want to have the very best people that we can handling those problems. As I told you, on the ground in Viet Nam we have Ambassador Lodge. He has been sent additional assistance since I took office in November.

Mr. Hilman felt that he should return to his faculty duties and he submitted his resignation to us. We had a reasonable time to elect his successor. We finally concluded, after conferring with Secretary Rusk at some length, that we should ask Secretary McNamara if he would be willing to let Mr. Bundy resign his place under his administration and move over to the State Department to take over Mr. Hillman's duties.

Thorough consideration was given to it and Mr. McNamara reluctantly agreed, but he did agree and we have been able to prevail upon Mr. Bundy to do that. We think that he is the best possible successor that we could have to Mr. Hillman, and we do think that this whole area needs every bit of the best manpower that it can get.

Rendezvous of Sailing Ships Being Planned

BOATING
By JACK WOLISTON
United Press International

Visitors to New York in July will be able to witness an event that may never take place again — a mass rendezvous of sailing ships now being used by 16 nations as training vessels.

Plans for the event, called "Operation Sail," have been underway for two years under a committee headed by Rear Adm. John J. Bergen, USNR (Retired).

The tall-masted ships, called by many the most stately and beautiful in existence, are scheduled assemble in Bermuda early in July and then sail singly and in groups to a rendezvous off New York.

The committee has set a tentative date of July 14 for the fleet to sail into New York harbor. They will cruise by a group of Naval units comprising a "Presidential Review" and then proceed to old Navy anchorages just below the George Washington Bridge in the Hudson River.

For seven days after that, the crews of the ships will be entertained at various festivities, including a visit to the NewYork World's Fair.

To date, 16 nations have accepted invitations to participate in "Operation Sail." Nine of these will be represented by major vessels such as Spain's huge four - masted, top - sail schnooner Juan Sebastian Elcan.

Operation Sail officials say they have not received an official acceptance from the Soviet Union, but the Russians have indicated they will send three ships led by the Tovrich II.

President Sukarno of Indonesia advised the committee his country's beautiful three-masted Indonesian barquentine Dewarutji would participate. The Dewarutji will leave in March for Yugoslavia, where she will be outfitted with new sails and other gear before going to Bermuda.

The United States will have nine ships representing the Coast Guard Academy, the Merchant Marine Academy, the Naval Academy, the Tabor Academy, and the Mystic Seaport in Connecticut. The last named will have three ships, including the Joseph Conrad a famous, fullrigged old whaling ship now used for training Mariner classes of the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

Great Britain and Argentina each are sending two ships, and Norway will have at least one and possibly two major vessels.

Other countries which will be represented include Canada, Chile, Nationalist China, Denmark, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Panama, Poland and Portugal.

Officials of Operation Sail say the chief aim of the project is to stimulate international good will through the friendly relationships the event will generate.

The New York State and New York City governments are backing the project, which also has received the full endorsement of the People-to-People program.

During the planning period, then President Eisenhower and the late President Kennedy both endorsed Operation Sail. The State Department said that while the event was not being held under the auspices of the U.S. government it "looks with favor" on Operation Sail.

BLOOD PRESSURE CONTROL

John had known about his high blood pressure for at least 20 years. It never bothered him and he felt no need for medication. Shortly after his 63d birthday, his family noticed a change in his intellect and behavior. He was unable to make decisions, used poor judgent, and became forgetful and untidy.

This deterioration was caused by hardening of the arteries of the brain. Occasionally, longstanding high blood pressure is responsible for arteriosclerosis and the changes usually are irreversible. But such degeneration often can be prevented by early treatment of hypertension.

At one time we thought the height of the blood pressure was not as important as what the elevated pressure was doing to the organs—the eyes, nervous system, heart, and kidneys. The physician checked these structures periodically and the patient was encouraged to carry on as usual when there was no evidence of damage.

We now know that lowering high blood pressure from the beginning is the best policy. We have the drugs to do it and there is no advantage in waiting for involvement of the vital organs. By then, it may be too late.

The type of management depends upon the personality. Those who are careful and conscientious can be depended upon to follow directions to the letter. But people who are annoyed by constant pill-taking—especially the alcoholics, the overworked, and the easily depressed—are not good subjects for an elaborate program. They require a simpler plan such as a one-a-day, long-acting tablet or capsule.

It might be wise for someone in the family to learn how to take the blood pressure. A daily reading helps convince the hypertensive that the remedy really works, even tho side reactions may occur. A day - by - day determination is a better index of the efficacy of the regimen than is a single test in the physician's office, especially if the individual happens to be upset that day. In such instances, the evaluation of the dosage would be based on unrealistic conclusions.

Endocrine Gland Disorders

M.S. writes: What does an endocrinologist do?

Reply

He is a physician who specializes in disorders of the glands of internal secretion—the pituitary, thyroid, para-thyroids, adrenals, thymus, pancreas, and the reproductive glands. Disturbances of these structures cause a variety of symptoms varying from giantism to menstrual disorders.

Belching and Gum

R. S. writes: My 66-year-old father, who is retired, chews gum all day long. He says it helps relieve his indigestion but I say it causes it. Could constant gum chewing bring on gas and belching?

Reply

They Don't Melt Away

D. F. writes: I read your article on the use of staplers after an operation. Do these staplers dissolve eventually or stay in the body for life?

Reply

They remain, as part of the anatomy.

Plant Allergy

Mrs. P. writes: Do live plants in the home cause hay fever?

Reply

Get Rid Of It

A. V. writes: Is it always wise to have the gall bladder removed after several attacks?

Reply

Yes, for three chief reasons: 1. There is no need to continue to suffer or endanger your life. 2. The infection may spread from the gall bladder to the liver. 3. It is better to have necessary surgery in youth or middle age than in old age.

Congestion from Alcohol

Reply

Yes, by increasing congestion of the affected nerve. This in turn might lessen the chance of recovery because irreparable damage to the nerve fibers occurs from prolonged pinching of the nerve.

Stones And Infections

Mrs. R.S. writes: Can a long lasting kidney infection cause kidney stones?

Reply

Yes. But — like the age old question involving the chicken and the egg—it is difficult to say which came first—the stone or infection. Many calculi form around clumps of bacteria or infected material, suggesting that infection existed first.

Fears and False Beliefs

D. R. writes: Is a phobia the same as a delusion?

Reply

No. A phobia is any persistent or abnormal fear, whereas a delusion is a false belief that cannot be corrected by reasoning.

Irritated Bronchi

M. S. writes: How long does it take to recover from bronchitis?

Reply

An acute attack usually lasts seven to 10 days. Chronic bronchitis may last a lifetime. Much depends upon the cause and the nature of the irritation and whether lung damage is irreparable or can be corrected. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on bronchitis.

Virus Affects Liver

Reply

Yes, in the majority of patients. But special tests would be needed to demonstrate involvement. Now and then, hepatitis is severe enough to discolor the skin and the whites of the eyes (jaundice).

Thyroid Activity

P. J. writes: Is it possible to have a goiter without an overactive thyroid?

Reply

Yes. Goiter refers to simple enlargement of the thyroid gland. The structure usually functions normally but may become over or underactive.

Cooked Are Better

G. T. writes: Are raw potatoes harmful to the stomach?

Reply

No.

Development Of Preemies

Mrs. M. writes: Does a premature baby catch up with other children in development?

Reply

Yes. One center conducted a followup study of the development of 100 prematures over a period of 11 years. Some in this group were too young to evaluate but, by age 8, 80 per cent had caught up in height.

Pressure From Gout

J. G. writes: Could gout cause pressure on the sciatic nerve, resulting in pain and spasm down one leg?

Reply

Now and then gout involves the spine. But the disease process would have to be well localized to cause pressure on the sciatic nerve as it leaves the spine.

Thyroid Nodule

E. A. W. writes: Once you get a nodule in your thyroid, does it grow larger or remain stationary?

Reply

Some grow. This is the reason physicians check the lesion at frequent intervals and recommend surgery if it has enlarged.

Cancer And Eggshell

E. E. A. writes: Could the accidental swallowing of a piece of eggshell cause cancer of the esophagus?

Reply

No. The worst the eggshell could do would be to scratch or obstruct the esophagus.

No Soap

M. writes: What is meant by the expression, "You have no soap to fight with"? Does it mean anemia or that the person is a general washout?

Reply

I've heard of soft-soaping, soap operas, and soapbox orators. But the expression you ask about is new to me as a diagnosis.

Nasal Congestion

D. R. writes: What makes the nose run in winter? I never have this trouble in hot weather.

Reply

Cold air stimulates the mucous glands in the nose. Some persons are allergic to cold and the membranes swell, causing nasal congestion.

CC Sets Up Asian Studies Program

Colorado College today announced the establishment of an Asian Studies Program. It will get under way in September.

The program, which will provide up to 25 semester credit hours of work in the area, is unusual for a small liberal arts college. It was regarded as distinctive in the Rocky Mountains.

Acting Dean Kenneth Curran made it clear, however, that while students could take all the Asian Studies courses offered, the program would not constitute a major.

The program was established by the faculty of the independent liberal arts college when it approved of the addition of four new courses to the curriculum.

Courses included in the program are two on the history of the Far East, A cultural history of East Asia, European imperialism (which deals with interaction of Asian and European cultures), Asian literature in translation, studies in modern Japanese culture, Oriental philosophy, and religions of the world. Religions of the world deals with Hinduism, Buddhism, Taoism, Confucianism, and Shinto.

History Prof. William Hochman, who was instrumental in establishing the program, noted that four of the courses are in the Social Science Division, two are in the Humanities Division and two are general studies courses.

"It should be possible for students majoring in almost any field in the college to undertake some or all of the Asian Studies offerings along with their major work," Prof. Hochman said.

He noted that the college was able to establish the program without the addition of new faculty members.

"We are fortunate," he said "that we already have on the faculty professors who are extremely well qualified to teach these courses."

Responsible for the history courses is Prof. Frank H. Tucker, an authority on the Far East. Prior to joining the Colorado College faculty in September, Dr. Tucker had been employed by the Navy. In addition to certain classified work, he directed the Navy's Asian Studies Program for a number of years. He is the author of numerous articles and a book on the area, and is fluent in several Far Eastern languages.

Teaching courses in Asian literature and modern Japanese culture will be Prof. Carlton Gamer, who lived last year in a Buddhist temple in Kyoto, Japan. He has studied Oriental philosophy, history and music at the University of California at Berkeley.

Oriental philosophy will be taught by Prof. Jane Cauvel, who studied the philosophy of the East at the University of Hawaii and at Bryn Mawr where she earned her Ph.D.

Teaching the course dealing with Oriental religions will be Prof. Douglas Fox of Australia, who earned his doctorate at the Pacific School of Religion.

Carson Group Visits Springs Civil Defense

Maj. Charles L. Patterson of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) training staff headed a 50-man group from Fort Carson and the division Wednesday visit to the Civil Defense Emergency Operations Center in Colorado Springs.

The officers and noncommissioned officers were briefed by Lt. Col. Charles Willoughby (ret.), Colorado Springs-El Paso County Civil Defense director, on the purpose of this model operational emergency headquarters.

He gave them a conducted tour of the blast-resistant structure under the Colorado Springs Police Building. Its four-foot reinforced concrete ceiling and 16-inch thick walls are built to withstand 30 pounds per square inch of overpressure blast.

The center has its own well for emergency use, rations and bedding for 105 persons for 14 days. It includes an emergency generator, chemical-biological filter, extensive medical facilities for an emergency, complete communications and broadcast systems.

Student Increase May Change College Programs

By LYNN POOLE
The Johns Hopkins University

Ninety-five years ago Dean Shaler gave a series of summer lectures in geology at Harvard University. As far as we know, this was the beginning of summer higher education in the United States. Today, the majority of our colleges and universities offer a program of summer instruction, usually remedial work or teach education for six to eight weeks.

However, with a veritable tidal wave of students clamoring for admission to college, many administrators are looking askance at classrooms, laboratories and dormitories sitting idle for as much as one-fourth of each year. Some 50 institutions have already adopted a full scale year-round program —and many more are studying proposals to do the same.

Several studies of year-round college operations have been made. The American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers says that a year-round calendar holds out the possibility of an increase in student capacity; President Kirk Grayson of Columbia University favors year-round operations to accelerate the educational process; a report made for the state of New York indicates that a year-round operation is far more efficient than the traditional method; several others echo one or more of these sentiments.

The chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, which has adopted a year-round schedule says: ". . .if we are going to meet the needs of the coming generation of students, we must make our resources go further by more intensive use."

Of the many ways to achieve a year-round operation, the newest and most controvesial is the so-called "trimester" system. Under this plan, the academic calendar is modified to consist of three terms, all of equal or near equal length.

The summer trimester is an integral part of the total calendar, including course offerings taught by members of the regular faculty. So far, fewer than three dozen institutions have the trimester system in actual operation, but a recent study by the Southern Regional Education Board indicates that interest in the trimester system is rapidly growing.

The picture is not entirely rosy, however. President Eric Walker of Pennsylvania State University, points out that summer attendance at many colleges and universities operating the entire year does not approach that of the fall and winter terms: ". . .students do not — and evidently will not — attend summer sessions as a general rule. The custom of going to school during the winter months and not during the summer months is an American folkway. . .Improvement must come thru a change in the attitude of the public."

An additional problem is the reticence of many faculty members to teach during the summer. They use the three months finishing that book, updating lectures. A reasonable faculty leave system and substantial salary increases will be essential for the success of any year-round operation.

Fred Hechinger, education editor of the New York Times, has succinctly summed up current sentiment in an article written at the time the University of Pittsburgh adopted the trimester system. "It appears that changes are about to be made, and Pittsburgh has started the ball rolling. Conservatives will frown, and some will sneer.

Enthusiasts will see utopia in the making. But nobody interested in higher education will ignore the experiment — one of the first designed to deal dramatically with the coming college crisis."

Polish Art Program Set Up at CU

A thousand years of Polish art and culture will be the subject of a program and several exhibits, all free and public, next month at the University of Colorado.

"A Compendium of Polish Art and Culture in Observance of Poland's Millenium," will be given at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Glenn Miller Ballroom of the University Memorial Center.

The program will highlight a month-long observance of Poland's birthday and the 600th Anniversary of the University of Cracow, Poland. Sponsors are the CU Center for Slavic Studies and the Polonia Art Society of Boulder and Denver.

The program will include a speech, "Poland's Contribution to Western Civilization," by Assoc. Prof. Edward J. Rozek of the Department of Political Science, a piano recital by Mrs. Henryk Ziomek of Fort Collins and a performance by the Boulder Folk Dancers.

The compendium also will honor Dr. S. Harrison Thomson, professor of history at CU, who will retire this spring. Thomson will be cited for "his dedication to the cause of Polish culture and for his distinguished and extraordinary achievements."

A salon exhibit of Polish prints, sculpture, paintings, portraits and costumes will augment the evening, opening one hour before the program.

In addition, several other Polish exhibits will be shown on the campus. The UMC will house two shows. One near the west stairway will consist of prints and will be entitled "Poland Today." It is scheduled for March 1-9. Another, located on the second floor, will include sculpture and paintings and will run thru March 9, and a display of Polish folk art will be featured at the entrance of Norlin Library until March 26.

An exhibit on "Poland and its People" is currently on display in the south wing lobby of the Chemistry Building.

Dermatologist Is Assigned to Ft. Carson

Sole dermatologist assigned to this Mountain Post is Capt. William N. Jones, who arrived at Ft. Carson in July, 1963. The captain is an expert on skin diseases at Ft. Carson hospital, and sole dermatologist for a community of 62,000, including Ft. Carson, Ent AFB, Pueblo Army Depot, the Air Force Academy and retired military personnel.

He entered military life after serving three years residency at the University of Oklahoma Medical Center. He received his bachelor's degree and doctor of medicine degree from Tulane University in New Orleans, then interned at St. Louis City Hospital, St. Louis. During his internship and residency the doctor did considerable research in the areas of photosensitivity and different forms of skin cancer.

A very busy man, the captain sees an average of 30 to 40 patients a day. His work begins at 8 a.m. when he makes ward rounds to visit any of his patients who are hospitalized, and continues as he sees office patients until lunch, if there is time to eat.

He sees patients by appointment until four and then interviews referrals or attends staff meetings and conferences until dinner. Evenings he devotes to studying for the American Board of Dermatology examination which he will take in the near future.

The hard work is well worth it, however. "One of the greatest satisfactions in my field," observed the Captain, "is seeing the psychological relief in a patient when the condition from which he suffers is explained and either brought under control or cured."

4102 BUTTERCUP

From the entry you take one step down to the sunken family room which is perfectly set off by an Early American brick fireplace.

We don't believe so beautiful a kitchen and den, that is really functional is easily found. The range, wall-oven, dishwasher, sink and refrigerator spaces are arranged to insure the least number of steps for the home maker in meal planning and preparation. Set in a brick wall in the den is a Bar-B-Que with its own rotisserie. When you look at it, visions of charcoal smoked delicacies dance thru your head.

The hall to the left of the entryway leads to the bedrooms and baths. The main baths imparts a feeling of luxury with its gleaming ceramic tile bath complete with built-in vanity.

Storage space? Oh, yes! Ample even for a large family. In the unfinished area is space for future bedroms with storage space left over even then. Drive North on Templeton Gap ½ mile Past Colorado Springs Country Club.

Traffic Signals Up Accidents AAA Club Says

Contrary to a widely held belief, traffic signals are not "safety devices," the Rocky Mountain AAA Club contended this week.

Altho admitting that traffic signals are essential at busy intersections, the AAA club stressed that the signals are necessary more from a traffic engineering point of view — to move a larger number of vehicles without undue delay — than from an accident prevention viewpoint.

In almost every city, pointed out the auto club, all of the high accident locations are signalized intersections.

Further, contended the club, when a given intersection is signalized, accidents are more likely to increase than decrease. Before signalization, explained the club, a typical intersection has stop signs halting traffic on the lesser of the two streets.

Consequently, traffic on one street has the right of way over cross traffic. Drivers on the lesser street usually wait for a gap in traffic on the major street before crossing or entering.

The AAA club suggested that, generally speaking, signals should not be installed if gaps in the major street's traffic are sufficient to allow cross traffic and pedestrians to move safely.

Traffic engineers, said the auto club, are constantly under pressure to install signals at lesser intersections, often at school crossing locations. Commented the AAA club: 'Well-intentioned parents believe — logically, to them — that a signalized intersection is bound to give more protection than is a non-signalized intersection. But accident records indicate that this might not be true."

Why do signals tend to increase accident frequency? The AAA club lists several reasons:

1. Some drivers enter the intersection on a late yellow and get caught by the red light.

2. Other drivers anticpate the green, especially on one - way streets where signals are progressively timed to turn green just as the traffic platoon arrives at the intersection.

3. Left turning vehicles frequently take the right of way from oncoming vehicles, especially at intersections with a left turn arrow that precedes the full green.

4. On multi-lane streets, some drivers swerve into a clear lane in order to pass vehicles stopped at the intersection, only to discover too late that those vehicles were waiting for a pedestrian or for cross traffic to clear the intersection.

BOGUS BOBBIES

LONDON (AP) — Complaints here charge it is so easy to impersonate a police officer that within one month bandits disguised as bobbies have stopped lorries, committed almost 1,000 crimes against private property and taken security firms by surprise for over $56,000.

The complaints say that used police uniforms, minus easily replaceable buttons and numbers, can be obtained simply, and police cars, stripped of markings but including registration numbers, can be bought for less than $200 at used car lots.

This week the sophomores have been receiving the results of the Aptitude Tests given in Nov. by the State Employment Agency. These tests indicate the career for which the student is best suited.

Sophomores also had their hearing checked with an audiometer furnished by the Health Department. This machine indicates if the student needs medical attention.

The Student Council has distributed mite boxes, containers for money sacrificed during Lent, to the students. These will be turned in after Easter. Any student not receiving one can obtain it in the office.

Mother Mary Florence, assistant mother general of the Sisters of Loretto, and four other Sisters visited St. Mary's Friday afternoon. They presented a vocation panel for the senior girls. A light supper was served.

The conference, held at Colorado University, had the theme "Challenge of Tomorrow." Those who attended were Terri Smith, Mel Perry, Diane Rodgers, Bruce Mangerich, Glenda Turner, Judy Smith, and Toni Cina. Sister Aline accompanied the group.

All freshmen will take the Iowa Test of Educational Development Monday and Tuesday.

KUDUS ARRIVE

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) —After a long and arduous trip which began last summer in Southern Rhodesia eight kudus have been placed in the Rio Grande Zoo here. The two males and six females will spend the rest of their lives in the zoo, but their offspring will be released in areas of the state similar to their native habitat, producing a huntable species of rare interest to sportsmen. A mature kudu bull, with its immense lyre-shaped horns may weigh up to 800-pounds.

Salvation Army Donations Are Tax Deductable

Articles which seem worthless to householders and business can be sizable tax deductions when contributed to the Salvation Army, according to Maj. Charles Griffin, Manager of the Colorado Springs Men's Social Service Center.

the full amount of the true value

"Any taxpayer can deduct the full amount of the true value of articles contributed. Business men may find this especially helpful in cutting income tax," Griffin stated. "Businesses can deduct the full current cost of any merchandise that is outdated or unsalable when it is donated to The Salvation Army.

People can actually help themselves by giving to The Salvation Army. Most articles they give have little worth to them, and usually just take up needed space. By contributing them to the program and deducting their value from tax returns, taxpayers can reduce their income tax," he stated.

Articles needed most at the present time are clothing and reparable furniture such as chests of drawers, beds, tables, and chairs, as well as usable upholstered furniture; however, Griffin said almost any imaginable item can be used in The Salvation Army Men's Social Service Center Program Household articles, outdated and obsolete business equipment, even rags and scrap metal are valuable in the rehabilitation work at the Center.

The rehabilitation program of the Center is built around the repairing, mending, and sale of contributed articles. The men who are admitted to the program are homeless, and 90 per cent of them have a drinking problem. To help these men solve their social and drinking problems, The Salvation Army program stresses work therapy.

Useful work such as repainting furniture, repairing appliances, or any of the other necessary mending jobs that must be done to make the articles ready for sale, helps the men return to normal lives.

Besides work therapy, the program provides many other aids for men from all over Southern Colorado at the Center located at Cascade Avenue and Cucharras in Colorado Springs.

To help the men physically, housing, food, and recreation are provided at the Center. To aid them spiritually and mentally, there is a full time chaplain and, also, a part time clinical psychologist for group therapy sessions.

Funds to maintain the Center are provided through sale of the contributed articles in Thrift Stores, such as the one located at 17 West Colorado in Colorado Springs.

In addition to helping support the work of the Men's Social Service Center, the Thrift Stores allow families with limited incomes to buy necessary household items, and are a good market for people wishing to furnish dens and cabins inexpensively.

"We try to give the men in the program more than just temporary help in a personal crisis," Major Griffin stated, "Our aim is permanent help that will allow them to live normal lives after they leave the Center. The only way we can continue to do this is by receiving contributions of reparable articles for use in the work therapy program and for sale in Thrift Stores."

Contributions of household items for use in the program can be made by calling for at-the-door pickup. The number in Colorado Springs is 633-4697.

For donors' convenience, there are also drop boxes located thruout the City. Old clothing, drapes, bedding, etc., can be left for collection. Boxes are located at Safeway stores in Security, on S. Tejon, South 8th St., 25th St., and in Bon Shopping Center, Miller Super Market on the West Side, and King Sooper Markets in Audobon and Golf Acres Shopping Centers also have drop boxes.

One of the easiest things to postpone is the making of your will. You have spent your lifetime accumulating property for the benefit of yourself and your family. If you postpone the few hours necessary to plan and work out your will with your attorney, you can undo these years of work, because you have failed to complete the job.

Your Will in Colorado. In almost every case, persons moving into a new state should revise the estate plans which they have previously made. If you have moved to Colorado, there are reasons why you should review your will and other estate arrangements:

(1) The laws of the state where you previously lived may differ from those of Colorado both as to the validity of your will and as to the interpretation which will be placed upon its provisions.

(2) If the witnesses to your will are not residents of this state, they would have to come to Colorado to prove your will, or their depositions would have to be taken, or they may be difficult to locate. This would add to the cost of settling your estate. It may also delay the administration of your estate at a time when your family might be in serious need of the benefits which your will bestows upon them.

(3) You may also have named as the executor of your will someone who is not a resident of Colorado — leading to probable further delay and expense.

(4) Each state has its own tax laws dealing with property passing by will. It may be advisable to examine the effect of Colorado inheritance tax laws on your will made in another state.

We strongly recommend that you have your will rewritten by a Colorado attorney as soon as possible to make sure that your family will be protected and that your estate will be spared unnecessary expense and delay in probate proceedings.

The Trust Department of The FIRST NATIONAL BANK will be pleased to make an appointment to discuss the administration of your estate in Colorado. Our telephone operator (635-3531) will connect you with a trust officer, or if you are in the bank any of our people will make an immediate appointment for you.

The late President John F. Kennedy issued a challenge to the 8,500 Girl Scouts who attended the Senior Roundup in Button Bay, Vt. in the summer of

Girl Scout Week to Be Observed March 8 to 14

1962. He said: "I ask you to pause and consider how you as individuals can prepare yourselves for service to your country and to mankind."

The campers discussed the President's challenge thruout the ten days of roundup. At the end of the encampment, they submitted to the President this personal commitment:

"We will re-examine the Girl Scout promise and laws and work harder to use them as principles to live by.

"We will keep an open mind in order to learn from our experiences, from situations, and from other people.

"We will develop in ourselves a craving for knowledge.

"We will try to find our prejudices and erase them.

"We will respect freedom as the right of every individual.

"We will try to leave a small part of ourselves in everything we do.

"We will promote peace in our world by first finding peace in ourselves."

This statement, written by teenage girls, eloquently elaborates the ideals embodied in the traditional Girl Scout promise: "On my honor, I will try to do my duty to God and my country, to help other people at all times, and to obey the Girl Scout laws."

For more than 3½ million girl and adult Girl Scouts, this year's theme refers to the traditional Girl Scout promise. But the 8,500 girls who were roundup campers in 1962 will remember also the promise they made to the late President. Both promises are pertinent in today's tense and confused world.

This observance of Girl Scout Week is a time to re-examine values.

An outstanding journalist of the Pikes Peak Region, Miss Elizabeth Shafer, will talk on photo-journalism before members of Theta Sigma Phi, journalism sorority, at their March meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Nell Womack Evans, 3311 Pennsylvania Ave.

Miss Shafer is a member and past president of Pen Women; a past president of Poetry Fellowship, and is now Colorado Fairchild Publication of New York City, which publishes some 24 trade journals. The "Hospitalized Veteran's Writing Project," in which a number of Theta Sigma Phi members have participated, was discussed at the last meeting. A magazine is published every two months, in which contributions of these hospitalized veterans are published. This serves as a therapy work for veterans, and by corresponding with a person interested in their writing, who will offer constructive criticism in the writing field, a veteran often takes a new interest in life and finds emotional outlet. Some prizes are awarded contestants, and all men participating aspire to have articles or stories published, with the ultimate hope of receiving an award. Members of Theta Sigma Phi are asked to take names of some of these men, to correspond with them, and to offer suggestions about their writing endeavors.

A project continent-wide in scope is the "United Nations Pilgrimage Committee," for which high school sophomores and juniors, 16-17 years of age, have been writing 500-word essays on, "My Community and its Relation to World Affairs." The local project is sponsored by Colorado District 16, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and local memlbers of Theta Sigma Phi have this week been judging, to select the winning essays. This is the Odd Fellows annual United Nations Pilgrimage for Youth undertaking.

Descriptive talks were given by two members who had taken trips to foreign countries during the autumn. Mrs. Harold D. Stumbough, who, with Mr. Stumbough, visited South America, told of life and customs in Peru, Brazil and Venezeula. Mrs. Gladys H. Colleges Added to AAUW List

The Colorado Springs Branch of the American Association of University Women announces the addition of 286 colleges and universities to the list of AAUW qualified institutions by vote of the association's Board of Directors late in November. Women graduates of these institutions will now be eligible for membership in the AAUW.

"The American Association of University Women in Colorado Springs," says Mrs. Alfred C. Wadleigh, membership chairman, "offers college women an opportunity to grow intellectually, to help further the advancement of women, and to discharge their social responsibilities. The AAUW program centers on four areas of interest: community problems, cultural interests, education, and world problems."

The Colorado Springs Branch is developing these interests this year by focusing on Occident and Orient and The American Family in a Changing World. The branch also supports the AAUW fellowships program, which awards about 100 fellowships each year, with stipends exceeding $282,000, to women scholars from the United States and abroad for advanced study. In addition, the Association supports a legislative program voted by delegates to its biennial convention.

Women college graduates interested in taking part in this program may call Mrs. Wadleigh, 634-0660, for membership information. Persons eligible for membership are especially welcome to visit branch and study group meetings in March. Fees paid in April 1964 cover membership until June 30, 1965.

American Music Society Announces March Program

The American Music Society will hold its March 4 meeting in the WES Room of Rastall Center. Mrs. M. H. DeNoya, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Laughren, Miss Alvaretta Enman, Mrs. Charles Woodard, Mrs. Tor Hylbom, and Mrs. Lowell J. Mills will act as hosts and hostesses. Gwendolyn Wacker will be the commentator.

Opening this program will be Margaret Thomas, soprano, singing two numbers by late 17th Century composers. "Un Certo Non So Che" was written by Vivaldi, a master whose instrument was the violin. He wrote twenty-eight operas, cantatas and motets. A good part of his writing is exemplified by an excessive striving after display and effects which are strikingly simply so far as they are novel. "Pur Dicesti O Bocca Bella", by Antonio Lotti is cited as a specimen of his writing for a single voice. Lotti's rank among musicians is a high one, from the fact that tho the last representative of the old severe school, he used modern harmonies with freedom and grace. Accompanying Margaret Thomas will be Verda Lawrie.

"Trio in E Flat" by Joseph Haydn will be presented by Margaret Smith, violinist, Joy Greenleaf, cellist, and Virginia Andrews, pianist. Into Haydn's string ensemble works he put more of himself than in any other musical medium. To them he confided his most personal thoughts and feelings; they reflect his personality completely.

George Garriques, tenor, will sing two numbers from Four Hymns for tenor, piano and viola, by Vaughan Williams, "Lord, Come Away" and "Come Love, Come Lord". The piano part will be played by Verda Lawrie, and the part for the viola by Don DeLaney.

May Fenlon, pianist, will continue the program with "Notturno" by Otterino Respighi, and "Humoresque" Op. 79 No. 2 by Max Reger. The music of Respighi has a double face, one side of which looks to the past and the other to the future. Most of his works belong to the past. They are the creations of a neoclassicist who was partial to old modes, plain chants, and classical forms. He used the Mixolydian mode for his piano concertos.

"Dormi, Dormi Bel Bambino" by Ricci, and Aria from "Robert, the Devil" by Meyerbeer, sung by Arlene MaKinney, soprano, will conclude the program. A dominant figure in French opera, Cherubini, was an important influence on Meyerbeer's operatic writing. His opera, "Robert Le Diable", on a text by Eugene Scribe, presented in 1831 was an instantaneous success and a permanent one. He was the most important composer to place the word "grand" in French grand opera.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. Price to Entertain Fortnightly Study Club

The Fortnightly Study Club will meet for dessert at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. I. Sloane Price, 907 S. Skyway Blvd.

In this capacity she will participate in special events during the opera season, May 18, 19 and 20, and act as liaison between residents of this community and the Dallas Grand Opera Association, which sponsors the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera to the southwest.

The Met touring season has been shortened this year due to extra performances in New York at the World's Fair. The southwest is fortunate to have three operas in Dallas included in this abbreviated tour, all of which are brand new productions this year.

Stars of the company listed for Dallas performance include Anna Moffo, Leontyne Price, Gabriella Tucci, Jerome Hines, Cornell MacNeil, Nicolai Gedda, Carol Bergonzi, Frank Guarrera, Rita Gorr, Judith Raskin, Rosalind Elias, Luigi Alva, Fernando Corena, and Regina Resnik.

Operas set for the three evenings of the Metropolitan Opera Week are "Manon," May 18; "Aida," May 19; and "Falstaff," May 20. Brochures outlining the Metropolitan season may be secured from Mrs. Darby or ordered from the Dallas Grand Opera Association, 1924 Elm Street, Dallas. Ticket orders will be accepted at the latter address beginning March 30.

Halibut Marengo Is Gourmet Dish

By GAYNOR MADDO X

Do you enjoy delicious food? Would you like to put more variety in your family menus? If the answer is "yes," then why not do as the French and other gastronomically gifted European chefs do — serve fish and seafood, gently cooked and interestingly seasoned, more frequently.

Take a look at this recipe for Halibut Marengo. It is really delicious. Tender, white halibut is combined with mushrooms, white wine, tomatoes and herbs. The result is fragrant and delightful — a gourmet dish any cook can prepare easily.

Halibut Marengo
(4 servings)

For four servings, plan on 1½ lbs. halibut steaks, fresh or frozen. If halibut is frozen, let partially thaw (for about 30 min- room temperature. Melt ¼ cup butter or margarine in large skillet. Saute 1 lb. mushrooms (sliced) or 1 (4 oz.) can sliced mushrooms and 1 medium onion (sliced) over low heat until lightly and evenly browned. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons flour over mixture in skillet and stir to make smooth paste. Add ½ cup dry white wine. Add 1 (No. 2) can tomatoes and ¼ teaspoon each oregano and thyme, ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Place halibut steaks in tomato mixture in skillet, cover and simmer 15 minutes.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Do tell me how you spray your hair with vegetable food coloring? I asked my beauty operator about it and he is sure you spend hours doing it. I will bet he is wrong. — Mrs. John H. Lamming

Hey there!

Don't "dare" put food coloring on your hair! I mixed this and an all-purpose dye in some water to dye my "grass" with . . . "not" my hair.

On my hair, I use colored washable hair spray from the dime store. Most times I stick to white, silver and blue. It costs less than a dollar and I love it dearly. It washes out with water.

I would hate to see a head of hair that was covered with food coloring. Some of these are quite permanent dyes! Or didn't you know? —Heloise

Letter of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

Our problem may seem amusing to you but it is grave to us.

We are university students and have spent long, hard months getting our sneakers presentably dirty. Now, the outside of the sneaker is perfect but inside they are too dirty.

Honestly, we are serious about this. Your suggestions would be appreciated. —Girls at KSU

Any answer, teensters? Write to Heloise in care of this paper. Letters do not have to be signed to appear. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Could you tell me what to do about a cedar chest that has quit smelling like cedar?

We also have a closet which we had cedar lined and it no longer smells like cedar, either. —Cedar Lost

I sanded the inside of one of my cedar chests once with a coarse piece of sandpaper. Immediately after removing a thin outside layer of the wood most of the odor came back. You might try it. Any more ideas? —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

The reason for turning on a back burner of your stove when cutting onions is that the burner "will" eliminate onion fumes, and thus prevent crying.

We all know that hot air rises. The back burner creates an air flow by heating the air and causing it to rise. The cooler air with onion fumes is drawn to replace the rising air. The resulting flow of air "does" prevent crying.

When cutting just one onion, I breathe through my mouth rather than through my nose. It is not possible to cry because the onion odor does not reach the tear-producing glands. Try it!

Some people put a piece of bread or a toothpick in their mouth to help themselves to remember to breath only through the mouth Bonnie Tuel Home Exconomist.

Dear Heloise:

When I run out of liquid detergent I often make my own by using one part of detergent granules with two parts of warm water (to make a good consistency).

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Another Viewpoint

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school teacher in Mount Vernon, Illinois. I read the following letter from your column aloud to my students, and asked them to write their own answers. I told them they didn't have to sign their names, and gave them five minutes in which to complete the assignment. These students are an average age of 16½. I am sending you their answers. Perhaps you would like to select the one you think is best for publication. —Sincerely, MRS. C. T. RACHELS

Your letter: "DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old boy and I have been wanting to quit school for over a year, but my parents won't let me. I hate school and I want to get a job. I failed two subjects last term, and know I won't do any better next time. My parents found out I was smoking and they ordered me to stop it. I told them if they wouldn't let me quit school I wasn't going to quit smoking. My Dad made a deal with me: he said if I quit smoking and continued with school, he'd buy me a car I wanted. I said okay. He got me the car and I really have been trying harder at school, but he caught me smoking. Well, he took the car away from me and I'm grounded until June. They said if I flunk anything I'll have to go to summer school. How can I get my parents to be more human?" —"MAD"

DEAR MRS. RACHELS: So impressed was I with the "answers" of your students that I had difficulty selecting the best. But since I was compelled to select only one, here it is:

"DEAR MAD: I don't believe your parents could be any more 'human'. It is YOU who should get out of space and come back to earth. You probably think you know all the answers, but you will learn as time goes by that your high school education is the most important thing in your life. Listen to your parents and you will find that they have already traveled the long journey that you are just starting, and they know what they are talking about." —"A JUNIOR IN HIGH SCHOOL

DEAR ABBY: There seems to be a campaign against "dropouts" from high school. It isn't necessary for everybody to get a high school diploma to be a success in life, you know. I quit school after the ninth grade and I did all right. You probably won't print this, but if you do, sign me — "DID ALL RIGHT IN LOUISVILLE"

DEAR DID: Congratulations! Perhaps you "did all right" in spite of the fact that you were not graduated from high school. But you'll never know how much better you would have done if you had earned a high school diploma.

Get it off your chest. For a personal, unpublished reply, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Locating the proper contract at which to play a hand sometimes presents difficulties to even the most experienced players. When the choice lies between two suits, almost invariably you should try to determine in which suit the partnership has the greatest number of trumps and select that suit, even though you personally do not prefer it. It is strange to observe how many players are unwilling to look beyond their own 13 cards in selecting a trump suit.

"Partner, it made no difference to me. I had the same number of each," is frequently heard, without consideration for the question, "How many of each has my partner?"

If your partner bids hearts first and spades later, and you have three small trumps of each, it is your duty to return to hearts even though you dislike to increase the contract, because you should know that your partner has more hearts than spades. Today's hand goes one step farther.

South opened the bidding with one heart, and North responded with two clubs. South bid two hearts and North, having virtually an opening bid, decided to move toward a game by bidding two notrump.

South, of course, was not pleased with the notrump idea and bid three spades. West passed, and North was faced with the problem which caused considerable trouble for the players who held this hand. Some of them stubbornly persisted to three notrump and South, exhausted by his effort to warn partner away from notrump, gave up.

How this contract failed is quite apparent. Others, quite properly deciding that his hand had to play at game and liking spades so much better than hearts, took their partner to four spades. The diamond opening and the diamond return brought the declarer down to three trumps and he was unable to manage the hand from here in. With the opponents having more trumps than himself, the hand collapsed.

North's vision had not been keen. The bidding shows plainly that South has six hearts and only four spades. Whenever the opener bids one suit twice before showing the other, in the vast majority of cases it shows that he has six of the first bid suit and only four of the second. If the holding were six and five, the six card suit would be bid first, but the five card suit would be shown at the next opportunity. It should have been clear, therefore, to North that the partnership owned eight hearts and only seven spades, and he should have returned to his partner's first suit.

Fresh Out of Miracles

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

During my girlhood, my father, an Englishman with the Englishman's intense love of gardens, grew roses which were his pride and delight.

In his old age he suffered from lapses of memory and consciousness. One summer day when he eluded our watchfulness and disappeared from our city apartment, I remembered his habit of escaping family vigilance by retreating to our apartment house roof. I found him there lying in cinders and soot unconscious, his face cruelly burned by the sun.

I roused him. As he recognized me, he said querulously, "What have you done with my rose garden? Where are my clippers? What have you done with them?"

I wanted to slap him. I felt such irritation at him that I was horrified at myself.

Not any more. Now I know why I wanted to slap him. I loved him. I wanted the power to turn the ugliness of the roof into a rose garden for him. I lacked it—and wanted to slap him for making me feel the pain of my helplessness to reverse time for him.

I recollect this personal experience for a reader who writes, "My mother, 82, is nothing but a bundle of complaints. I hope I can take old age better than she does. Every day I am told to look at how thin her hair is getting. She can't get up from a chair without complaining about pains in her knees. If it isn't her hair or her arthritis, it is the cold in the house she can't stand . . ."

You can't reverse time, either.

In old age our parents are apt to endow us with the magical powers they ascribed to their mothers as children. When they feel discomfort at the changes time is making in them, they ask us to make it go away by complaints. They expect us to restore their lost rose gardens, the agility of joints and blood warmth of their days of vigor and beauty.

We mustn't reproach ourselves for the irritation aroused in us by their impossible demands.

For it is really our sympathy angered by our helplessness to grant the demands. So we must see that our anger is felt, not at them, but at ourselves—at our painful inability to produce the miracles they demand. It begins to disappear the moment we can credit it with the frustrated love it represents.

Pumpkin Pudding

Pumpkin Pudding

1½ cups canned pumpkin
¼ cup firmly - packed light brown sugar
¾ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
1 cup cold milk
1 package (2¼ ounces) custard-flavor dessert mix

Cook and stir constantly over moderate heat the pumpkin, brown sugar and pie spice until very hot—about 10 minutes. Off heat, gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. Add the dessert mix and stir in well. Bring to a boil over moderate heat; boil for 3 minutes. Spoon into six 5-ounce custard cups; chill until firm. Top with vanilla ice cream. Makes six servings.

80 Million Americans Wear Glasses

How good are your eyes?

If you're a gambler, you would win money betting that the other guy has defective vision. On the basis of statistics, the chances are slightly more than one in two that something is wrong with your eyes.

Close to 80 million Americans wear glasses. There are at least two million who have inadequate vision even with glasses, and about one million are blind. Every year another 30,000 Americans become blind.

To point up the problem of protecting the nation's vision, Congress has proclaimed the first week of March, 1964, "Save Your Vision Week."

There are many popular misconceptions and myths about vision. Some of them are discussed in Today's Health, the magazine of the American Medical Association.

Ophthalmologists (physicians who specialize in eye care) usually agree that there is no such thing as eye strain. Those pains and discomforts that sometimes follow long hours of watching a jumpy television screen actually are due to eye fatigue. Your eyes need to rest, too.

Children do not outgrow crossed eyes, and this condition should be treated as early as possible. Otherwise some loss of sight could result.

Good vision is important to safe driving of an auto, but perfect vision is by no means required. The driver who has a few drinks under his belt is much more dangerous than the nearsighted driver whose defect is reasonably well corrected with glasses.

Carrots do not improve the vision. Carrots contain vitamin A, but only a very small amount of it is needed and it is found in many of the foods we eat, as well as carrots.

The most common of the serious eye diseases, glaucoma, cannot be cured, but it usually can be arrested by treatment, and further loss of vision can be presented. Regular checkups for glaucoma are most important, particularly to those past 40.

Cataracts, a lens disorder occurring most often in older people, can usually be corrected by surgical treatment. Loss of vision from a forming cataract can be slow and sometimes isn't noticed by the patient at first.

Children should have their first medical eye examination at the age of three or four, and should be re-examined each year. The small child may have grossly defective vision and not know it. This can wreak havoc with his schooling, in that he may not be able to read his textbooks, or to see the blackboard. Many a child labeled stupid by teachers and parents was later found to be nearsighted.

What can you do to protect your vision?

The most important thing is to have regular eye examinations, preferably once a year. And make certain that everyone in your family gets a regular checkup, particularly the children. Any noticeable change in vision also is a clear tip-off that something is happening to your sight and that an examination is needed.

MISSED ON BASEBALL

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Donald C. Lillis of the Bowie racetrack says he got into racing after making Larry MacPhail an offer of $2 million for the New York Yankees more than 15 years ago.

A TOUGH HOME TEAM

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—The most games a University of Kentucky basketball team had lost at home until the 1962-63 season was two. But the 1962-63 team lost five, one by one point in two overtimes, two by two points, one by three points and one by nine points.

Robinson Leads Pokes To Victory Over AFA

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Flashy Flynn Robinson, Wyoming's one-man point machine, scored 40 points here Saturday night for his highest total on the home floor this season to lead the Cowpokes to a 99-75 victory in non-conference play over the visiting Falcons of the Air Force Academy.

This followed up an earlier win by the Pokes at the Academy in which they defeated the Falcons, 62-59 in overtime. In that game, Robinson was held to 24 points, somewhat below his season's average.

Wyoming now has a 11-13 record this winter with two more games to play. The Air Force, now at 11-10 for the season, was looking for the clincher for a winning season.

The Pokes took the lead with less than five minutes gone in the game and never gave it up. They raced to the highest score any team has compiled against the Air Force team this season.

The AFA will wind up its season next Friday night with a home game against the strong Ducks of the University of Oregon.

With a 16-point first half by Robinson, the Pokes led 48-38 at halftime. The high total also shattered the Falcons' defensive average of holding opponents to 60.7 per game.

Other double-figure scoring efforts by the Pokes were center Leon Clark with 17 and forward Dick Sherman with 17. Behind Judd in the scoring for the Falcons were Mike Pavich with 13, Ed Sullivan with 12 and Sam Peshut with 11.

The Pokes hit 54.5 per cent from the floor and 75 per cent from the free throw line. Wyoming out-rebounded the shorter Falcons, 43-28, with Steve Frenchik grabbing the most with nine.

Terrors, Indians Win In First Round Games

By TOM CUSHMAN

Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Palmer's City Hockey League champions and runner-up Cheyenne Mountain skated their way into the finals of the high school post-season ice tournament with twin victories at the Broadmoor World Arena Saturday night.

Tom Brennen's Terrors, who swept thru the league campaign undefeated, tacked on their 13th straight triumph with a hard-fought 4-1 win over Wasson in the evening's nightcap. Earlier Cheyenne had posted a decisive 7-1 victory over Fountain Valley.

tack with a pair of goals and an assist. Reinking provided the Tribe with a 1-0 lead in the final second of the first period by flipping in an unassisted goal six feet from the side at the buzzer after the teams had played on even terms thruout the period.

The Terrors' second score came after another tight struggle for the majority of the second period. Reinking skated up the middle after a face-off at center ice and shot a pass to Dave Buckley who shoved it past Wasson goalie, Bill McClelland, at 8:37.

Palmer's hard-nosed inner-defense chopped off the Thunderbird attack for two periods and more than five minutes of the third Saturday. During that time the Tribe was erecting a 3-0 margin that proved to be more than enough to withstand several late T-Bird flurries.

Palmer's ace center, Chuck Reinking, topped the Terror at-later with Bruce Mahanke turning the trick after a pass from Tom Brown. Reinking then closed out the scoring with less than a minute remaining when he arched a shot nearly three-quarters of the length of the ice that skipped thru McClelland's legs.

Cheyenne and Fountain Valley also battled thru a tight first period. The Indians got the initial counter at 6:43 on Jeff Thacher's shot but the Danes pulled into a deadlock less than two minutes later when Dave Low sent a screamer into the nets from 50 feet away.

Only 40 seconds later Cheyenne went ahead to stay on a Bob Richardson goal. Richardson added to the margin early in the second period with a short rebound of his own shot and then was credited with an assist 38 seconds before the end of the stanza with Bob Jones getting the score.

Deadlock Kills CC Dreams

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Colorado College didn't win here Saturday night and they didn't lose either. But as far as the Tigers' chances in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs are concerned, it might as well have been a defeat.

The Tigers came from behind for a 5-5 tie — their first ever in league games — and both CC and home-standing Michigan State University failed to score in the sudden death overtime period.

That gave the Colorado team a 4-9-1 WCHA record with two more games to play. But the Tigers needed the victory to keep alive hopes for fourth place and the last berth in the post-season playoffs. The best they can manage now is fifth.

Friday night CC also came from behind, but then they pulled out a 5-4 victory in the overtime period of Jeff Sauer's tally.

Saturday, with the Spartans trailing at 4-2 going into the third period, Michigan State jumped into a 5-4 lead on goals by Mike Coppo, Carl Lackey and Tony Elliott.

With 1:14 remaining, Colorado's Dave Peterson beat substitute goalie Alex Terpay to force the overtime period. The teams battled for teams battled for 10 minutes without a score. Under WCHA rules, only one sudden death overtime period is allowed.

Warren Fordyce, Sauer and Ken Hanson gave Colorado College a 3-1 lead in the first period, and Johnny Simus scored to make it 4-2 at the end of the second stanza.

In other games Saturday night, Michigan University kept its league lead with a 4-3 win over Michigan Tech. That reversed an upset by Tech on Friday which was only the second league loss for the Wolverines this season. Michigan has a 10-2 WCHA record compared to idle Denver's second place rating of 6-1-1.

East Stuns South Five In Pueblo

PUEBLO — Pueblo East threw the South Central League second place race into a four-way tie here Saturday night with a smashing 90-68 triumph over South's favored Colts.

The Eagles' Bill Brown turned in the league's top individual performance of the season in spurring the victory by scoring 36 points. Teammate Dan Noll backed up the effort with 23. Robert Ball led South with 15 and Ron Schwab had 14.

East all but iced the game in the first period, outscoring the Colts 27-12 and the Eagles owned a 47-26 advantage at halftime. It was 78-48 after three periods.

The upset left East, South, Trinidad, and Centennial tied for second place as the SCL heads into its final week of active. The eventual second place winner will have a chance at a state tournament berth in a playoff game with the runner-up team from the Northern League.

In Retrospect

After viewing the telecast of last Tuesday's title fight between new champion Cassius Clay and Denver's former king of the ring Sonny Liston, and then seeing the film currently being shown thruout the country in theatres, it's still a confused mess.

Loudmouth Paradox

The film was especially enlightening to anyone who wished to studoy the fight in retrospect. Knowing how it finished, and what was supposed to have happened early in the bout, it was far easier to concentrate on the movements of each without the distraction of suspense.

It still doesn't compare to ringside, just as losing the prospective of any contest by remote viewing, but you do get a pretty good idea of what was going on . . . at least as much as can be determined without extrasensory perception.

To anyone who has seen this Liston in the flesh, tho, it was a sure thing he was not as his best.

Credit this to over - confidence and a well - planned psychological pre - fight maneuver on the part of Clay, the injury to Liston's shoulder which has been substantiated by doctors, or perhaps under training by the ex - titlist, but it was quite clear the usually fearsome bully who learned his trade while serving a stretch in the Missouri pen didn't have his normal reactions.

There are those who will point a finger of fix on the fight. It looked almost too obvious for that, however, or least it was a pretty corny ending and surely those in charge could have thought up a more believable way to take the dip.

Perhaps more plausable would be a realistic look at Liston's age — which would seem likely to be nearing 35 in that he admits to a 19-year-old daughter — and a chronic history of unusual injuries to his near muscle - bound body.

Don't disparage the deceptive speed of Clay, which certainly kept him just out of range of one of those sizzling hooks from Liston in the first couple rounds, but it's doubtful that he could have knocked the big guy off his feet had the bout gone the distance. Maybe most anyone else currently in the game, but not this hard headed brute.

The most supicious part of the whole affair was the number of times Liston allowed his cute partner in the ring to escape while on the ropes, with hardly a punch being thrown. It could be that Liston is so much a one-handed (left) fighter htat he couldn't cock his right fast enough in the clinch, but it also looked a bit shady when he was unable to tag him when Clay was near blind in the fifth or when he had him groggy in the third.

From the second round on, tho, you could sense a complete change in style from the champ and this was slightly late in the game to be switching battle plans. After the third Liston could hardly lift his left arm above his chest, and the power that has made many quivver was converted into little more than a harmless ham hanging from his left shoulder.

Now the big question is what is the future for Clay. Will there be a rematch and was it preplanned? Will he go into the Army and freeze the title? Will he quit as threatened once this week? Will he continue the practice started by Floyd Patterson of picking his opponents carefully with preservation of the title uppermost in his mind?

With Clay the paradox he is, only time will answer these questions.

It was certainly encouraging this week to see the enthusiasm of the regional coaches and officials toward the prospects of improving the summer baseball program in the Pikes Peak area.

Planning for the All - Star game between players from within the city against those from the suburbs has been on the drawing board actually for two or three years, but finally it will be a reality come June. It's a natural drawing card, and there's no reason why it shouldn't be a great success in the first crack out of the box.

The main purpose of the game, besides the opportunity for the finest players in the region to play against one another, is to raise money to help the programs that follow thruout the summer months. Those in charge feel that the best way to improve the entire scene is to hire professional coaches for without proper leadership the

Cheyenne Mountain, Salida Dominate Voting

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

The voting for the 1964 Pikes Peak League All-Conference team was split among 12 players for the first team unit.

Selected by the PPL coaches, the voting was dominated by Cheyenne Mountain and Salida. Cheyenne personnel grabbed two slots on the first unit with the Tribe's poised backcourt general, Jack O'Brien, in addition to making the first team, was selected for the coveted award — the PPL Most Valuable Player.

The Indians, victors of the league championship and slated for the State Class AA Tournament next week in Denver, also placed their effective pivot, Joe Folk, on the first team.

Salida, three-time PPL champion, drew two berths on the first team with Dean Champlin and 6-7 John Lantz getting the nomination. Harrison's gunner, Fred Stephens, rounded out the five members on the first unit.

The second unit is composed of Leadville's talented junior center, Jack Hosley; Jim Ridgon and Kay Morey of Manitou Springs; Herb Woolsey of Florence; and Air Academy High's top scorer, Lance Jensen.

The nine coaches in the league, with the exception of Leadville, turned in a ballot for the PPL All-Conference voting only for the other teams' players. No one was allowed to submit a vote for his own player which makes for a fair selection.

With the exception of the towering post, Lantz, all members of the first unit are seniors. The Salida cager is a junior. Hosley was the lone member of the second group who is an undergraduate. The Leadville pivot is also a junior.

Champlin and teammate Lantz were the only members of the first unit to gain the majority of the votes as the other three cagers managed to collect just enough votes to make that squad. This points out that the league this season was composed of outstanding players. Many coaches indicated that selecting the All-Conference team was difficult because of the ample supply of top-notch players.

Mason Rudolph Takes Lead In New Orleans Tourney

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Unerring accuracy with his pitching irons sent Mason Rudolph into the lead of the $50,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a 36-hole six-under-par 138, with the thick shadow of Jack Nicklaus not far behind at 140.

Rudolph, who admits he can't see the "E" on an eye chart without thick-lensed glasses, added a 70 to a first-round 68. He missed only two greens.

Nicklaus, 23-year-old Masters and PGA champion, was equally consistent as he shot a second-round 70 over the 7,020-yard par 72 Lakewood Country Club course in near-freezing temperatures.

In third place was Dave Marr, young touring pro from New Rochelle, N.Y. who sank a 70-foot putt on the final hole for a 71 and 141.

Arnold Palmer failed to shake a prolonged slump and shot a 71 for 147. His game generally improved but after a 33 on the front nine he took a double bogey seven on one hole and a bogey on another to ruin his round.

Charles fired a four-under-par 68, the best score of the day, matched by freshman pro Dudley Wysong, for a 144. Boros snapped back with a 70 for 146. Wysong also had 146.

Fred Hawkins shot his second straight 71 for fourth place at 142, followed by Bobby Nichols' 71-72—143 and the veteran E. J. (Dutch) Harrison 71-72—143.

Defending champion Bo Wininger had a 74 for 150 which survived the cutoff point of 151, reducing the field from 161 to 95 for the final two rounds.

Spain's Santana In Dixie Finals

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI)—Defending champion Manuel Santana of Spain battled his way into the finals of the Dixie International tennis tournament here Saturday and will face Australian Roy Emerson Sunday.

The 27-year-old Emerson was barred Saturday from Davis Cup selection in 1964 by the Australian Lawn Tennis Association and was told he could not play on any Australian team in international competition until April 1, 1965.

The ban is a result of Emerson's refusal to abide by a ruling by the Australian group that no Australians could play outside Australia prior to March 31.

Emerson is studying an offer of $50,000 to turn professional. The contract would cover a 30-month period.

Santana earned his finals berth by beating Rafael Osuna of Mexico 6-2, 6-3, 7-9 and 6-3.

So after several seasons of splitting teams between programs and thus hurting the overall competition, it looks like we will again have a consolidated league and cooperation from all concerned.

Still needed, however, are sponsors for these summer teams which will play under the American Legion Junior Baseball banner. Anyone wishing to jump on the bandwagon to help this cause is invited to give the local commissioner, Ed Richardson, a call at 634 - 4739 or ring the Legion Hut.

Our hats are tipped to the men who have worked so hard on this so far.

I understand the situation surrounding collegiate hockey is not quite so rosey. . . .

Some of the officials at Colorado College are in favor of dropping the University of Denver from future schedules, going along with the rest of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. This boycott was intended to try and align the Pioneers with the rest of the loop as far as bringing in older players from Canada to compete against recent grads of American high schools — the trend of most schools now.

This week Athletic Director Jerry Carle was to have some chit — chat with Denver administrators, pertaining to the future of the CC - DU series and consistency in the league. But one spokesman from CC said he was told by Denver's Murry Armstrong that there would be no change in the policy on hockey as long as he remained there.

The DU coach argues that fans will only turn out as long as they have the best possible players to watch. He says he wants no compromise in ability for the Pioneers would no longer draw large crowds.

However, by his own arguement, Armstrong is saying that no one should watch his collegians as long as the professional Denver Invaders are in town. There's no doubt as to which team is better.

And by the same token, nobody should watch high school football or basketball as long as there's a college team around. A check of the figures reveals that theory is a lot of hog-wash.

It's really unfortunate that the powers that be in Denver can't seem to see the light on this matter. They are going to continue to be stubborn enough to try and hold out against this siege from the rest of the teams and it's eventually going to kill the sport at their school.

No one wants this to happen, but as long as they take such a professional outlook on filling those seats at all cost in principle, perhaps for the good of everyone concerned it would be better to start digging their grave.

Dijkstra Wins World Title, Chris Haigler Takes Fifth

DORTMUND, Germany (AP) —Sjoukje Dijkstra of Holland, getting the first-place vote of all nine judges for a brilliant free-skating performance, won her third consecutive women's world figure skating championship Saturday.

Miss Dijkstra, also the Olympic champion, put on a flawless show in Dortmund's giant Westfalen Hall, twirling around the ice and negotiating many difficult jumps. The Dutch star had entered the free skating with a big lead built in the compulsory phase of the competition.

Miss Dijkstra's nearest rival, Regine Neitzer of Austria, managed to hang on to her second place despite two falls, one while doing a double axel and the other while making a turn at the edge of the rink.

Canada's Petra Burka was third. She put on a spectacular free-skating performance that brought cheers from the 12,000 spectators.

Four special trains brought 5,500 Dutch fans to Dortmund to see Miss Dijkstra.

The 22-year-old Amsterdam physician's daughter had 2,365.7 points and nine ordinals. Miss Heitzer, 20, had 2,220.0 points and 21 ordinals and Miss Burka, 7, 2,216.0 and 24.

The United States took three places in the top 10, with Christine Haigler heading the American contingent. Miss Haigler, 16, of Colorado Springs, Colo., finished fifth with 2,113.7 points and 52 ordinals, automatically qualifying for the 1965 championships scheduled to be held on her home rink in Colorado Springs next March.

Miss Haigler had entered the free-skating portion in fourth place, but slipped one notch. U.S. champion Peggy Fleming of Pasadena, Calif., fell two places to seventh in free skating, finishing with 2,111.7 points and 56 ordinals.

The women's competition ended the championships. Manfred Schnelldorfer of West Germany won the men's singles. West Germany's Marika Kilius and Hans-Juergen Baeumler won the pairs title and Eva and Pavel Roman of Czechoslovakia won the ice dancing crown.

Adams State Meets St. Joe For NAIA Berth

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — St. Joseph College and Adams State College will play Monday for a spot in the NAIA Basketball Tournament.

NAIA District 7 officials said today the game will be played in Albuquerque, N. M.

St. Joseph, an Albuquerque independent, has a 16-7 season record. Adams State, of Alamosa, Colo., currently leading the Rocky Mountain Conference, is 16-6.

Brighton Topples Kadets

John Delventhal's Kadets concluded their basketball campaign on a losing note as visiting Brighton dumped the Academy High cagers, 79-72.

Altho the Big Blue jumped ahead for a 20-16 first period score the northern team rallied in the following period to pour in 24 points to close the gap 36-34. The Brighton five continued their torrid pace in the last half to eke out the decision with 22 and 23 points in the last two periods.

For the Kadets, the team's leading scorer Lance Jensen pumped in 13 points and Charlie Neyhart also contributed 13 points. Bill Culver also collected a dozen points for the Academy High squad. This loss gave the Big Blue a 6-10 won-loss record in overall play and the Academy High cagers tied for second place in Pikes Peak League standings via a 5-3 mark.

Salida Dumps Widefield In PPL Final Encounter

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Don Schmidli's run-gun Spartans served notice to the Pikes Peak League teams that the Salida squad is back in the groove after a previous weekend of fruitless endeavors when they stormed past Widefield, 75-56, Saturday night in the PPL finale.

And the Spartans will be a tough club to handle in the forthcoming PPL District Tournament slated to begin Thursday at the City Auditorium in Colorado Springs.

The southern kingpins, three-time winner of the PPL championship title 3-years running, took approximately 12 minutes to shake off a ragged quarter-and-a-half of basketball before they settled down to control the scoring. From that point on the Salida aggregation maintained a 10-point span and put the game on ice in the third period.

This game concluded the PPL campaign, thus making for a three-way team tie for second place between Salida, Academy High, and Manitou Springs. Cheyenne Mountain clinched the league crown two weeks ago and Friday night the Tribe toppled cross-town rival Harrison to write an undefeated slate in eight outings.

Both Widefield and Florence ended the season with a 4-4 won-loss record to deadlock for fifth place while Harrison finished with a 3-5 mark for sixth place and Fountain's 2-6 record took seventh place.

The Fountain squad will play host to winless Leadville this Monday night at the Fountain gym to decide the eighth place berth in the District Tourney. Four games are on tap for the tournament opening day this Thursday beginning at 4:40 p.m., and continuing thru the night. Cheyenne will meet the winners of the Fountain-Leadville contest in the tournament opening game, Thursday.

In Saturday's PPL finale, the Spartans encountered a slow start but the visiting Salida group fixed its radar to dominate the scoring and backboards mid-way thru the second period. From that point on there was little doubt that the towering Spartans put teeth in their fast-break offense with 6-7 John Lantz and E. J. Dunckhorst leading the way.

Dunckhorst and Lantz each contributed 20 points apiece with Lantz controlling the boards. The Salida towering post snatched 18 rebounds to lead both teams in rebounding.

For Widefield, Chuck Rushmer put in an outstanding performance pumping in 21 points in addition to his superb rebounding against the taller Spartans. The Gladiators' leading carom specialist pulled down 17 rebounds to keep pace with Lantz.

Altho Tom Petersen's Gladiators started out on the right foot establishing a 15-12 first period margin, the Widefield cagers encountered a cold streak in the following period as they could only accumulate nine points while Salida bagged 22.

From the field the Widefield squad shot poorly, hitting only 20 of 81 attempts while Salida made good 34 of 82 field goals. However, the Gladiators fared considerable better at the charity lanes sinking 16 of 25 free throws.

Even tho the Spartans lost three encounters this season, the giants from Salida are near peak condition for the coveted District Tournament crown and a berth in the state tourney next week. Cheyenne qualified for a slot in the state tourney when the Indians won the PPL championship, but the other seven teams will be gunning for that second berth in the state competition.

Texas Tech Keeps Hopes for Title Beating Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) —Texas Tech kept its mathematical chance for a share of the Southwest Conference basketball title alive Saturday in a wild 87-86 victory over the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Texas A&M has already clinched a tie for the SWC crown.

Texas Tech leaped to an eight - point lead midway through the first half before Razorback Warren Vogel went on a ball-stealing spree late in the period to push Arkansas in front 50-45 at the half.

In the second half it looked as if the Razorbacks would run away with it when they spurted to a 66-53 lead with 14:53 left. But then Harold Denney and Tom Patty started hitting regularly for Texas Tech and the Red Raiders launched a full court press that bothered the Razorbacks.

Big Eight To Be Open For Bowls

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Big Eight Conference, its tieup with the Orange Bowl ended, decided Saturday on an open policy for post-season football competition.

Athletic directors and faculty representatives agreed to abide by an old rule which requires approval by faculty representatives for a team to play in any post-season game.

Last season was the final one for an 11-year-old arrangement by which the Big Eight champion went to the Orange Bowl. In addition, and for last season only, the Big Eight had approved participation by any of its teams in the Blue Bonnet and Gator Bowls.

The directors and faculty men, at their quarterly meeting, also named a committee to review the conference's formula for distribution of revenue from post-season games. The committee will report at the May meeting.

They also voted approval of re-entering the inter-conference letter of intent program applicable to all sports. Last year that program embraced six conferences and four independent schools. Under the interconference program May 20 is the first date on which an athlete can sign an interconference letter of intent in any sports.

The Big Eight has adopted its own letter of intent for basketball, with April 1 this year being the first date on which an athlete may sign such a letter.

The conferees also relaxed freshman competition rules to provide that freshman teams in all sports, except football, will be permitted to schedule games against freshmen teams, junior college teams, "b" teams from four-year colleges and military service teams. They also decided that for this year only, inasmuch as this is an Olympic year, freshmen will be allowed to compete in relays at Kansas, Kansas State and Colorado.

Reaffirmed at the meeting was the procedure that in the event of a two-way tie for the conference basketball championship, Wayne Duke, the executive director, will name a date and place for a playoff to determine the team to go to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

Kendall Leads Rice Victory

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rice's 6-foot-10 center Kendall Rhine scored 28 points Saturday to take over the Southwest Conference scoring lead and pace the Owls to a record 104-86 win over Texas Christian in a regionally televised Southwest Conference basketball game.

It was the most points ever scored by Rice in a league game. Their all-time high is 110.

The Owls jumped to a quick 10-0 lead and TCU never got closer than eight points again. The Horned Frogs made a semi-determined bid shortly after the second half began cutting an 18-point halftime deficit to eight points, but they never got closer.

BACKWARDS START—Ken Kirch (foreground) of the Air Force Academy and Arizona's Tom Sawyer start off the 400-yard medley relay event during Saturday's varsity meet at the AFA pool. Arizona won the event in the time of 3:58.4, but this wasn't enough to overtake the fast Falcons who wound up their season with a 63-31 team victory.

TERRY GETS A TAKEDOWN—Air Force Academy All-America wrestler Terry Isaacson, with knee on the mat, takes down Colorado University's Leo DeRock during the 167-pound match in Saturday's meet between the intra-state rivals. Isaacson won one of only two Air Force grapplers who weren't defeated by CU as the Buffs ran up a 26-5 victory. Isaacson and DeRock wrestled to a draw, 5-5, altho Terry kept alive his string of undefeated matches in duel meet competition over a three-year span.

AFA Swimmers Win, Wrestlers Lose to CU

In the next to last weekend of winter sports at the Air Force Academy this season, only the swimming and wrestling teams had home contests on Saturday. These two split with the swimmers defeating the University of Arizona in a dual, 63-31, and the mat squad dropping a 26-5 decision to the University of Colorado.

Other teams in action were the basketball squad playing at Laramie against the University of Wyoming, the fencers at Iowa University, the gymnastics squad at the University of Nebraska and the rifle team at Wyoming.

A good sized crowd was on hand for both of the local meets Saturday afternoon in the final big weekend of action this winter. Several also viewed an exhibition squash match.

Colorado failed to win only two of the matches in wrestling as Cadets Thad Wolf won a close decision in the 137-pound class and All-America wrestler Isaacson drew with CU's Leo DeRock in the 167-pound division.

Pins registered by the Buffs went to John McArthur over Bob Hovde at 123 pounds, 1963 NCAA champion Dean Lahr pinned the AFA's Al Pfeltz in 7:47 at 177 pounds, and in the heavyweight match CU's Richard Redd from Pueblo nailed Frank Salat in 4:52.

It was the final home match of the season for the Falcons.

In swimming it was a different matter as the Cadets splashed their way to a lop-sided win over the visiting Wildcats from Arizona. The Air Force won all but three of the individual events and they took both relays altho the final 400-yard freestyle relay came by forfeit when Arizona's team was disqualified after crossing the finish line first.

A guy with the unlikely name of Tom Sawyer paced the Wildcats by winning the 200-yard backstroke and starting the 400-yard medley relay.

The victory gave the Falcons a season's record of 6-6 with the schedule completed. Arizona now stands at 4-6 for the season with the Western Athletic Conference championships coming up next weekend at Albuquerque.

In a freshman meet between the Air Force and Colorado U., new pool records were set by the AFA's Steve Seigler from Chicago and Rich Abramson from Jamaica Estates, N.Y. Seigler set a new mark of 2:22.4 in the 200-yard breaststroke, bettering the old time of 2:25.2 held by All-America swimmer Zechiel of Utah in 1962. Abramson set a new record in the 1,500-meter event with a time of 20:29.0 to top the old mark of 21:05.1 held by Jim Jamerson of Air Force in 1960. Abramson also established a record of 20:32 in the 1,650 yard event which is new to this country.

All the times in the AFA-Arizona meet were meet records except for the 100-yard freestyle.

WRESTLING RESULTS

Hill Rise Captures Derby Win

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Heavily favored Hill Rise captured the $132,400 Santa Anita Derby Saturday by some six lengths, notching his fifth straight victory and stamping himself as a threat in the coming campaign in the 3-year-old division.

The time was 1:47 2-5, a record for this 27th running of the Derby as 54,000 fans roared in excitement.

Bowlers and bowling teams will compete April 19-25 on the alleys at the Army's Fitzsimons General Hospital in Denver. From May 17-23 the courts at Ft. Carson will see championship volleyball, while tennis enthusiasts will compete for Fifth Army honors at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., from June 21 to 27.

Participants in all areas will receive instruction in expert techniques from outstanding coaches and manager, as well as top stars on the sports scene.

GETS FIVE GOALS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The Springfield Indians may have been last in the American Hockey League's Eastern Division but defenseman Dave Amadio put on a championship exhibition in scoring five goals in a 7-1 victory over Rochester of the Western Division.

Previously, Willie Marshall of Providence and Ron Attwell of Cleveland each scored five goals earlier this season but both are forwards.

Dispute Over Athletics May Kill Fan Support

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Charles O. Finley's drawn-out lease dispute with the city is over, but another big question remains—how much fan support has been killed by the dispute and Finley's attempts to move the Athletics?

Undoubtedly, a residue of bitterness remains and it's bound to have an adverse effect on attendance.

But the situation is far from hopeless, providing the focus is put on the baseball team—and kept there.

Probably the most important factor in the entire pictue is the performance of the team. If it creates interest, it will ge good support—even from some of Finley's sworn enemies.

As of now the financial situation is bleak. Only about 760 season tickets have been sold and no television or radio contracts have been negotiated, with opening day only six weeks away.

However, a strong bid for the first division by the A's once the season gets under way would help dissolve the financial handicap.

The club's chances for such a bid hinge largely on Manager Ed Lopat's ability to develop young pitching talent. The A's had to sacrifice front-line pitching to get sluggers Rocky Colavito and Jim Gentile. But fan reaction has been largely favorable to the trade. The fans view it as a gamble worth taking.

Finley was smiling and affable as he signed a four-year lease Friday, ending the dispute which brought him close to expulsion from the American League. It was just a week after other AL club owners voted to authorize a meeting to see about lifting Finley's franchise.

The white-haired, 45-year-old insurance broker did his best to convince on-lookers he wanted to forget the dispute and promote the team. City officials urged all-out support of the club.

Fan reaction varied but it held some hope.

"I think it is going to be real rough for Finley's club, at least for a while," said Kenny Bass, a home builder. "I wish it were not so because I'm a baseball fan and I'm for American League baseball. I'll support him."

S.T. Lusco, a restaurant owner, said, "I'm for baseball and I'm not going to let this trouble we've had with Charles O. keep me from doing all I can for Kansas City and the American League."

But Ed Leahy, deputy sheriff, said, "I don't believe the people will support Finley after all the things he has said about Kansas City."

Lloyd Mayan, another restaurant owner, declared, "I don't want any part of him. I used to buy a season ticket every year, but not this year."

Sugar Ramos Heavy Pick Over Japanese Challenger

TOKYO (AP)—World Featherweight Champion Sugar Ramos and Japanese challenger Mitsunori Seki meet in a scheduled 15-round title bout Sunday night that hardly any one expects to go the distance.

Ramos, 24, is a strong favorite to make his second successful defense of the crown he won from the late Davey Moore last March by a 10th-round knockout. The Cuban first defended it against Joe Rafiu King of Nigeria in Mexico City last July, winning a 15-round decision.

He captured the Orient featherweight title from Veeranid Chareernmuang of Thailand in 1962 and has successfully defended it five times. He is currently ranked second for Ramos' title on the World Boxing Association list.

Since 1958 he has piled up a pro record of 42 wins, 24 by knockout, five losses and a draw.

Ramos, on the other hand, has never lost a decision or been stopped in 48 bouts although his record shows he was disqualified two years ago for butting in a bout with Rafael Chamacho. In six years of professional fights, 38 of Ramos' victories were knockouts.

Big Eight Cage Attendance Shows Increase

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Big Eight basketball home attendance this season is certain to be the third highest in conference history, with six teams up from last season.

One of the two teams down from '63 is Kansas State, which leads the conference on an average of 10,438 for eight games. The other team down is Iowa State, fourth in the league with a 5,346 average.

The conference average is 5,397 for 74 home games with 13 games left. Kansas State has three home games left and it's likely the league will reach 475,000, or an average of 5,460. Last season it was 5,008.

Best attendance year in Big Eight history was 1957, when the average was 6,922. This was Wilt Chamberlain's sophomore year at Kansas and the Jayhawks set a league record with an average of 15,500. Next best was 1958, Chamberlain's last year, when the league average was 6,059.

K-State is the Big Eight attendance champ for the past 13 years. By the end of this season, K-State will be over 1.4 million, Kansas will be over 900,000 and the conference over 5 million for the 13 years.

Colorado's average this season of 5,809 is its best since 1956, Missouri's 3,371 is bet 1956, Missouri's 3,371 is best best since 1961 and Oklahoma State's 5,161 best since 1961.

Oklahoma has a 3,598 average with one game left for its best at Norman in at least 13 seasons. Second best is 3,500 in 1957 and the Sooners might fall below that in their final home game. Kansas is second in league attendance this season with a 6,700 average.

Don Caum, offensive end and defensive halfback, led Penn State football players in action last fall. He was in games for 995 plays.

Beatty Says U.S. Needs Building

By ED McHALE

United Press International

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI) — Almost confidentially, the wiry little guy leaned across the restaurant table and assessed the United States' Olympic chances. Enthusiasm and eagerness crept into the half-whisper.

"We should send to Tokyo the strongest and most impressive men's track and field team ever assembled in the history of track and field," he confided. "But if we want to continue to send teams to the Olympics that America can be proud of, we've got to change our thinking."

The speaker was 5-foot-6 Jim Beatty, world record holder of three distance marks who currently is engaged in a footrace to stamp out the juvenile dropout problem in North Carolina.

"We have to develop more club teams if we are to continue to be the dominating power in track and field," said Beatty, 29, who hopes to overcome the latest in a series of injuries which have hobbled him on at least three crucial occasions. "We've got to build facilities, encourage the great Olympic idea of internatioal competition, analyze the athletic programs at our colleges and universities."

"We have improved, to a degree, our women's track and field teams," Beatty went on. "But we need to somehow change the outdated thinking of college administrators and convince them they should incorporate into their school programs more athletic programs for girls.

"We have to start in 1964 at the latest. It won't come overnight."

Beatty, a native of New York City who moved to Charlotte, N. C., at the age of 4, has his eye on the 5,000 meters gold medal at the 1964 Tokyo games. His vigorous training program was "thrown back two months" last October, however, when he cut his foot carrying out the garbage for his wife, Barbara, at their apartment in Durham, N. C. The cut required 12 stitches to close. He has cancelled the rest of his winter (indoor) schedule to give the foot time to heal.

Heavy Slate for DU Teams

University of Denver athletic teams will help commemorate the university's centennial celebration this week with one of the businest winter sports schedules of the season.

The skiing team will headline the week's activities when it seeks its fourth consecutive National Collegiate Ahtletic Association championship and 10th such title in 14 years at the NCAA meet Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 5-7, at Hanover, N.H. Dartmouth is playing host to the national ski meet this year.

The Pioneer slatmen, coached by the world-famous "Builder of Champions," Willy Schaeffler, will be slight favorites in the national meet even tho they did not win the Rocky Mountain regional meet last weekend.

It should be pointed out that the Pioneers were weakened by injuries to two of their top stars in that meet, alpinist Myke Baar and nordic competitor Phil Shama. Both had played key roles in four straight wins by DU during the regular season. Baar definitely will be ready to go this week and it is expected that Shama will also. Other who will represent DU include Don Brooks, Chris Rounds and either Rolf Dercum and Spence Bocks in the alpine; Rounds in the jumping; Harald Bjerke in cross-country; and Aarne Valkama, Erik Jansen and possibly Laase Ottersen in nordic.

The DU hockey team, boasting the best defense in college hockey, will close out its regular season against a strong Michigan Tech sextette on Tuesday and Friday nights in DU Arena. Face-off time for both games will be 8 oclock.

The Pioneers are still in contention for the championship of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, and should they win it, would pick up their fifth crown in the last seven seasons.

The DU icers are a cinch to finish in one of the two top WCHA spots, good enough to earn a home-ice berth in the league playoffs on March 12, 13 and 14. This should give the Pioneers an excellent chance to win the playoffs and thus qualify as one of the Western teams in the NCAA Championships which will be played in DU Arena on March 19, 20 and 21.

The DU basketball team will also be at home twice, playing its final two games of the year against Air Force Academy Wednesday and the University of Oregon Saturday. Both contests will be played in the DU Fieldhouse at 8 p.m.

In gymnastics, DU will play host to area high schools in the annual DU High School Invitational meet, to be held in the DU Gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday. Rounding out the busy week of activity will be the Pioneer wrestlers who will end their dual meet season Saturday against Nebraska in Lincoln at 8 p.m. The DU swimming team has completed the season.

Boxing World Mourns Death Of Former Light-Heavy Champ

CLIFFSIDE PARK, N.J. — (UPI) —Boxing Saturday mourned the sudden death from a heart attack of 49-year-old Gus Lesnevich, who ruled as light-heavyweight champion of the world for seven years.

Lesnevich, who was "never sick a day in his life" and had forecast he would live to be 94, had those numbers reversed for him Friday night when, after feeling poorly during the day, he died suddenly in a doctor's office.

Funeral services for Lesnevich, who left his widow and five children, will be held Tuesday.

Mrs. Inga Lesnevich said that her husband complained of chest pains Friday and thought he was suffering from indigestion. His wife drove him to the office of Dr. John Williams, where he suddenly fainted and died.

Former heavyweight champion James J. Braddock, a close personal friend of Lesnevich, recalled that he and Lesnevich "made at least a thousand appearances together during the last 20 years."

"He never said 'no' to anyone who wanted him to go somewhere," Braddock said. "Boxing fans will miss him."

Lesnevich twice challenged Billy Conn for the light-heavyweight championship before World War II but lost both times. Then, after Conn moved up to heavyweight ranks, Lesnevich gained recognition as champ by the National Boxing Assoication when he outpointed Anton Christoforidis for the vacant title, May 22, 1941, and world recognition followed on Nov. 14, 1941 when he defeated Tami Mauriello at the Garden.

Gus retained the crown for seven years, a reign topped for duration in light-heavy-weight annals only by Archie Moore, who held it nine years. He finally lost the title to Freddie Mills of England on July 26, 1948.

In London Saturday, Mills called Lesnevich's death "a terrible thing."

"He was a very nice guy and I think I am right in saying that he was the best weight-for-weight boxer I ever fought," said Mills, now a restaurant owner. "I had the greatest admiration for him and his colored photograph is still on my mantle shelf."

British boxing promoter Jack Solomons called Lesnevich "the best-behaved American fighter ever to come to this country."

Harry Markson, boxing director of Madison Square Garden, said, "I would say that Gus Lesnevich was one of the rare men in boxing who have only friends. He was a good fighter and a great world champion."

At his death, Lesnevich was a public relations representative for a truck corporation and also was a boxing referee.

Regional Revised Rankings

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — (UPI)—The Intermountain Tennis Association Saturday revised its rankings and elevated Linn Rockwood of Provo, Utah, to the number one men's singles position.

The revision of rankings, election of officers and establishment of a tournament schedule highlighted the groups' annual winter meeting.

The rankings, announced earlier this year, had Billy Wright of Cheyenne, Wyo., in number one men's singles. Both the Utah Tennis Association and the central Utah's Tennis Association had protested the rankings on the grounds they were made in a "haphazard manner."

The revised ranking dropped Wright to the number two spot formerly given Rockwood.

Other officers elected were James R. Shannon, Denver, first vice president; Gerald C. Hart, Lehi, Utah, second vice president; Ford Cooley, Great Falls, Mont., third vice president and David L. Freed, Salt Lake City, secretary.

Reidy was named sectional delegate to the United States Lawn Tennis Association convention and Freed was named delegate at large.

Emerson Barred From Davis Cup

MELBORNE, Australia (UPI)—Roy Emerson, considered by many the leading amateur tennis player in the world, was barred Saturday from Davis Cup selection in 1964.

The harsh move by the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia Virtually doomed Australia's bid to recapture the coveted trophy it lost to the United States last December, in the opinion of many experts. But local officials felt it was essential to regain "control" over their wandering stars.

Norman Strange, president of the LTAA, said Saturday that Emerson had automatically barred himself by defying the Australian body and playing in the Dixie International tennis tournament at Tampa, Fla., Friday.

The ban, which extends through April 1, 1965, also denies Emerson the right to play on any other Australian team in international competition. However, Emerson still is expected to take part in such major tournaments as Wimbledon and the U.S. nationals under private sponsorship.

The status of Ken Fletcher, who is in the United States with Emerson, is unknown as yet, but it is almost a certainty that he too will be hit with a similar ban.

The LTAA warned Emerson and Fletcher against playing in any overseas tournaments between Feb. 28 and March 31. It advised them of the strict penalties that would be exacted if they failed to adhere to the ruling.

Emerson, who won his two singles matches for Australia against the United States in the Davis Cup challenge, said Friday that he was considering a $50,000 offer to turn professional, but until then he would continue with the Caribbean circuit.

Denver Rolling Cowboys To Appear at City Aud

For the second year in succession, the Ent AFB Sabres basketball team will be given "wheels" for a cage tilt with the Denver Rolling Cowboys. The annual wheelchair basketball outing will come off Sunday, Mar. 8 at 8 p.m. with the City Auditorium being used as the game's site.

Ent's cagers will once again take to the wheelchairs a few days before the game for some vigorous practice. The Cowboy's have no trouble with the chairs, however, as they are paraplegics and have lived most of their lives on wheels.

According to Bob Mullenberg, Ent project man for the game, all proceeds from the gate will be donated to the local Easter Seal campaign.

Half-time activities will include a free throw contest pitting the skills of four local personalities against each other. Colorado Springs Mayor Harry W. Hoth and Ent Base Commander Col. Howard H. Cloud Jr., will be tossing from the charity line along with local sportscasters Jack Finlayson and Sam Aro. The free throws will be shot from wheelchairs.

Tickets for the game are a dollar for adults and 50 cents for students and military. The Sabres will be rolling around Ent during the morning of Mar. 7 selling tickets for the tilt.

Chamberlain Helps Warriors Achieve Status

By JACK STEVENSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Check the standings, the boxscore. . .compare them with a year ago and you might well wonder. . .just what has happened in the National Basketball Association.

San Francisco's Warriors are on top in the Western Division where a year ago they wound up in fourth place with a 31-49 record.

The starting line-up has the same names as a year ago.

"What we've got now mainly is the confidence. They don't panic. Early in the season they would panic. . .worry about getting the ball to Wilt. And the record last year was not an indication of the caliber of this team."

Chamberlain's help comes from many. Wayne Hightower, in his second NBA season, has the experience and fits in at forward after being center most of his career. At 6-9, he compliments the 7-1 Chamberlain. Tom Meschery provides power at the other forward.

In the back court are veteran Guy Rodgers, Gary Phillips who gained needed experience in 1962-63 and Al Attles, the speedy No. 3 man.

Your Outdoors

By MARY SHIRER

For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

THAT STRIP OF BLUE

The clouds hung low and heavy and it looked as tho rain or snow would come any minute. The trip planned surely would have to be changed and preparations were made to stay home or do something indoors.

Suddenly the clouds became lighter - a pale sun showed thru and a little later a strip of blue commenced to show. Spirits began to rise and soon everybody was in the mood to go and gathered their things together to make their departure. A little bit of sunshine and blue sky can change the whole atmosphere in a few minutes and people soon make a quick decision.

What a wonderful day it turns out to be and how near you came to stay at home and would have missed a splendid trip! Weather controls our lives to a very great degree. It can bring us pleasure or it can bring disaster, it can bring financial success or it can bring losses. How many times the farmer is urged to continue his work in the fields by a little blue sky or workman with their building which necessitates good weather.

Colorado Skies can change quickly. From deep blue sky to dark menacing clouds then back to blue sky. Bright sunshine to clouds. A heavy rain and terrific thunder storm that is almost frightening very soon changes to bright sunshine and blue sky.

Colorado is noted for its sunshine and azure skies so when the storm appears, we know it will quickly change. High mountain peaks can look grim and forbidding and in a few hours become calm and peaceful, bathed in bright sunshine. On a hot summer day, a heavy shower comes up about noon and you think the day is ruined. Another glance at the sky and the sun is shining.

The sky looks like an ocean blue as we glance upward in its fathomless space. It is like standing on the beach watching the ocean. The deep blue sky impresses all who like the outdoors and while hiking over trails, we hear repeatedly, "look at that sky"! Did you ever see such a deep blue! Is it any wonder we miss it when the clouds hang low? That strip of blue gives us a hope that is something so tenacious that we change our plans and do the things we want to do and go places. We look toward the sky to find the secrets of the weather.

On the morrow we plan certain work which requires good weather. We scan the sky and the blue appears. There is joy in our hearts for now we can accomplish what we set out to do.

When weather interferes with our plans, there is much disappointment and it is difficult to adjust ourselves to something else, but after all, life is just like that. We are continually looking for the best that life can offer us.

The blue sky and sunshine and the rosy morn and when things do not come our way, the sky is full of clouds and we cannot see a single strip of blue. Our spirits rise with the blue sky and sunshine. A rainbow burst thru the scattering clouds like a triumphal arch with many colors. It was born in a moment and seemed to stretch to the uttermost ends of the earth.

Life is arched with changing skies. Children are all smiles or tears and we are not far from it. There is a sunny bank, covered with wildflowers, a place we love to go and look at the blue sky.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Energy and Ice.

NEEDED: Large pan, two glasses, two thermometers, ice, hot and cold water.

DO THIS: Put moderately hot water in the large pan. Put ice water in the other glass. Set water in the ther glass. Set both glasses in the large pan of warm water, and place the thermometers in the glasses.

WHAT HAPPENS: The temperature of the ice water and the water containing the ice should be the same at the beginning of the experiment. But note that the temperature of the water rises, while that of the water - and - ice mixture remains about the same — until the ice melts.

HERE'S WHY: Ice must absorb heat from its surroundings in order to melt — 80 calories of heat per gram of ice. Therefore, while heat from the hot water rises the temperature of the water in the glass, the equal amount of heat that goes into the mixture is absorbed by the melting ice.

A collection of these scientific puzzles is in book form under the name "Science Circus." It is in bookstores and libraries.

Foresight Can Save Sight Society Says

Foresight can save sight if there's a "clean-up, paint - up, fix-up" campaign planned for your home this spring, counsels the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness in a "Save Your Vision" message today.

The eye safety alert was prompted by reports of injuries during cleaning and gardening chores last year, said John W. Ferree, M.D., executive director of the sight conservation agency. This week has been proclaimed national "Save Your Vision Week" by President Johnson.

Trash fires were the cause of particularly serious accidents, such as the Midwestern man hurt when an aerosol bomb discarded in a trash fire exploded in his face, or the Pennsylvania woman seriously cut around the right eye when a glass bottle blew up in the incinerator behind her home.

Discarding old bottles or cans in the rubbish fire can mean tragedy if the heat explodes them and sprays blinding fragments of glass or metal for yards around, the national society warns. The danger is multiplied if the container still holds some combustible powder or liquid. Disposing of old flashlight or portable radio batteries in the trash fire is also risky; they explode with immense force when subjected to heat.

Eye protection such as safety glasses or plastic cover goggles are a must for painting and planting work, Dr. Ferree declared, citing the case of the housewife - decorator who got two eyes full of paint when a spray can nozzle gave way as she was using it. Eye injuries among gardeners cutting branches or shrubs are numerous in the society's files, he said.

Eye safety is a major program of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc. Founded in 1908, it is the only national voluntary health agency devoted exclusively to sight conservation thru research, education and preventive services. Working nationally and thru state divisions. The NSPB has headquarters at 16 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016.

'CAR PERSONALITY'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Interviews conducted in Vermont, Maryland and Michigan as part of a major study of litter sponsored by the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute reveal that many normally law-abiding Americans have a "car personality" that transforms them into litterers when they take to the highways.

Convicts Will Not Talk About Death

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — Seven State Penitentiary inmates were in isolation cells today after refusing to take lie detector tests in connection with the death of a prisoner.

Leonard Walker, 31, died Feb. 7, the day after an unexplained explosion and fire in his cell.

Tinsley said two prisoners submitted to lie detector tests Thursday, were cleared and went back to their cells.

Air Officer Earns Political Science Degree

Seventeen years of blood, sweat, and tears have paid off for Capt. Donald L. Stensrud of the 9th Aerospace Defense Division. In taking the Air Force officer from a high school education to a Bachelor of political science degree.

Capt. Stensrud's degree was obtained thru "Operation Bootstrap," an armed forces program designed to give service personnel an opportunity to complete their degree requirements at an accredited college or university. He completed his college work while attending the University of Omaha from July, 1963, to January, 1964.

After his high school days in Robbinsdale, Minn., Donald Stensrud enlisted in the Air Force and worked steadily toward his goal. In addition to a full-time military occupation, he soon began his studies. While stationed in England, Stensrud took advantage of extension courses being offered at his air base by the University of Maryland. He met his wife overseas. The future Mrs. Stensrud was already a member of an Air Force family. Her father, an Air Force officer, was also stationed in England. Mrs. Stensrud played an important role in the final realization of her husband's goal of higher education. "She has not only stuck by me thru all this," says Capt. Stensrud, "but for a time she took the University of Maryland courses with me." She encouraged Stensrud, by then a T. Sgt., to apply for the Officers Candidate School. He received a commission as a second lieutenant in 1953, almost five years to the day after enlisting. Except for the time spent at Omaha University, Captain Stensrud's study has been on his off-duty time.

Capt. Stensrud is director of maintenance within the Deputy for Communications and Electronics, Ninth Aerospace Defense Division. He and his wife reside at 1413 Laurette Dr. with their two children, Susan, age 10 and Donald, age five.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Warner Bros. Studio disclosed Wednesday that it will reissue the motion picture "PT 109," the story of the late President John F. Kennedy's World War II naval career.

The movie, starring Cliff Robertson as young Lt. (J.G.) Kennedy when he was a torpedo boat captain, was first released last year but was withdrawn from theaters the day the late President was assassinated.

Mayor Moves to Racial Neighborhood

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)—Mayor Arthur J. Holland has made his move into a century-old house in a racially mixed neighborhood and is now looking hopefully for some of his fellow citizens to join him in bucking the social tide.

Holland, his wife, Betty, and their little daughter Cynthia, 10 months, moved into their row house Friday, while about 75 of their neighbors, both Negro and white, watched from across the street.

The house, purchased for $7,000, is one of a row of old houses that were fashionable but are beginning to deteriorate. Holland is having $10,000 worth of work done to his house, including installation of new plumbing, heating and electrical systems.

7 Local Persons Among Woodrow Wilson Fellows

Seven local residents are among 68 Woodrow Wilson Fellows that Colorado's secondary schools have produced since 1958, according to a survey released today by the Woodrow Foundation.

Within the state top honors go to the East High School of Denver, which graduated 11, South High School of Denver, which graduated 10, and William Palmer High School of Colorado Springs, with six.

The six Palmer High School fellows were: Karen Kossuth, class of 1963; Gary Wynn Boucher, '63; Arthur Lane Dana, '63; David S. DeYoung, '62; Clinton Edward Jencks, '59, and Judeth Ellen Livingston, '61. The seventh was Jerry L. Macon, Cheyenne Mountain High School, '63.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation is a private foundation whose purpose is to encourage talented students to choose college teaching as a career. "Since 1958 over 6,500 Fellowships have been awarded for first year post-baccalaureate graduate study," Dr. Hans Rosenahupt, national director of the Foundation, said.

Local Marine Part of Taiwan Duty

Marine Cpl. Gary L. Johnson, son of Mrs. Della Johnson of 344 Mesa Rd., is participating with the First Battalion, Fourth Marine Division, First Brigade in a coordinated U.S. - Nationalist Chinese amphibious exercise called "Operation Backpack" being conducted off the coast of Taiwan.

Backpack is an exercise to test the amphibious capabilities and readiness of the forces of the Seventh Fleet and the Nationalist Chinese Navy. The exercise, with over 40,000 men and 140 units participating, will culminate in an amphibious assault on beaches of southern Taiwan, and will demonstrate the effectiveness of the United States Seventh Fleet to rapidly move a significant combat force to a troubled area in order to assist an ally.

Prior to the assault, aircraft of the Seventh Fleet will soften beach defenses. In addition, support ships will conduct anti-submarine warfare exercises and the area surrounding the beachhead will be clear of any obstructions and mines.

"Backpack" is similar to those exercises conducted periodically by units of the Seventh Fleet with SEATO and other allied nations in the Far East to improve their proficiency in coordinated amphibious warfare operations and to maintain working relationships with allied nations.

The EXCHANGE was only 28 years old when Barney Oldfield drove his racer up Pikes Peak in the first Hill Climb in 1916!

The whole nation took an interest in the first Pikes Peak Hill Climb, August 11 and 12, 1916. Since then this spectacular event has gained world prominence. The great B. E. "Barney" Oldfield, a contestant, brought fame and publicity to the first Pikes Peak Hill Climb and to Colorado Springs. So famous was Barney Oldfield that traffic policemen would greet violators of speed laws with, "Who do ya' think y'are—Barney Oldfield?" One of the contributing factors in Oldfield's successful racing career was the ability to "save time"—every second was of major importance.
